GANGLAND'S INSIDE REVEALED BY LEADER

"SCAR-FACE AL" PLEADS FOR PEACE IN GANG WARFARE

"Butchery" Decried By Leader In News Interview

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Violating all traditions of gangland, "Scar-face Al" Capone, alias Brown, acknowledged leader of the illicit alcohol traffic in Cook County, has talked.

In an amazing interview given in his room at the Hawthorne Inn, in Cicero, Capone reveals for the first time, intimate details of the inside workings of gangland.

The dreaded name of "Scar-face Al" has echoed through all the bloody chapters of Chicago's gang warfare. His notoriety reached a new peak in the mysterious killing of Assistant State's Attorney William McSwiggin and two gangster companions, the latter alleged rivals of Capone.

He was sought, arrested, questioned and, as many times before, released. "Insufficient evidence," said the prosecutors. Now, with the murder of his latest known rival Hyime Weiss, Capone again expects to be arrested and questioned. Meanwhile, he describes this "butchery" and voices a plea for peace.

Capone says: "I've got a boy. I love that kid more than anything in the world. Next to him I love his mother, and then my own mother and my sisters and brothers."

"I don't want to die. Especially, I don't want to die in the street, punctured with machine-gun bullets. That's the reason I've asked for peace."

"I've begged those fellows to put away their pistols and talk sense to me. They've all got families, too. I know I've tried since the first pistol was drawn in this fight to show them that there's enough business for all of us without killing each other like animals in the street. But they don't see it."

Here Capone launched into his early history.

"I was born in Brooklyn. My folks were born there, too. I have to laugh at the way those hoodlums squawk that I'm a foreigner and that I've imported foreigners so that an American hasn't got a chance in this business because of me."

"Seven years ago, Johnny Torrio came to New York and asked me to come out here and go in business with him. I came and Johnny and Nails Morton and myself went into business. Everything went

BELIEVE GANG LEADER SHOT BY PALS; WITNESSES TO SHOOTING TESTIFY AGAINST THUGS

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Belief that Earl "Hyime" Weiss, slain gang leader, was shot by two of his pals in a "triple cross" intrigue gained credence today as the coroner's jury continued its investigation.

Weiss and one of his henchmen, Paddy Murray, were killed and W. O'Brien, attorney for Joe Salts, another notorious gangster, charged with murder, was seriously injured in a machine gun ambush in front of Holy Name cathedral here, Monday.

Eye-witnesses to the shooting have testified that Sam Pellar, Weiss' bodyguard, and Ben Jacobs, politician and friend of Weiss, both of whom were slightly wounded in the gun play, shot and killed the gang leader.

Charles E. McKibben identified both men before the coroner's jury as the two he saw firing point-blank at Weiss. He said, after killing Weiss, Pellar and Jacobs ran and were themselves wounded by the machine gun, mounted in a window overlooking the street.

The authorities are divided in their opinions as to the motive for the shooting. While some credit the theory that Weiss was killed by his own henchmen, others are convinced that the gang leader came to his death at the hands of "Scar-face Al" Capone or members of his gang.

Capone and Weiss were hated rivals in the struggle for control of the beer and alcohol traffic in Chicago and Cook County.

The federal government stepped into the investigation today, determined not only to aid local authorities in solving this crime but to invade the Capone-controlled village of Cicero and break up the vicious ring of liquor-law violators centered there. Before the end of the week, every member of the Cicero police force will have been called before the federal grand jury to tell what he knows of booze graft there.

Another sensational development in the case is the report that spies for none of the powerful gangs have had the home of United States Senator Denten under surveillance and were under orders to assassinate any liquor graft informers who might visit him.

REPRESENTATIVE FROM STATE HEADQUARTERS AT G. O. P. MEET

A plea to the electorate of Greene County to exercise its right of franchise at the November election, was the dominating note stressed by speakers at the initial mass meeting of Republican men and women and party leaders at the E. Main St. Masonic Hall Tuesday evening.

Participating in the opening rally of the campaign in this county, Mrs. Amy Logan, representative from Republican state headquarters at Columbus, told of the increasing prosperity and benefits derived by the Negro race from the administration of the Republican party.

The speaker also made an urgent plea for some form of an educational campaign for women voters that they may vote according to their thoughts and convictions and in a correct manner at the polls.

In addition to describing the part women will play in the election, Mrs. Logan lauded Senator Frank B. Willis, Republican senatorial nominee and Myers Y. Cooper Republican gubernatorial candidate.

Machinery was also set in motion at the meeting to make a house-to-house canvass of the city in order to impress upon the voters the need of turning out at the polls November 2.

The meeting was also addressed by County Auditor R. O. Wead, chairman of the Greene County Republican Executive Committee and Dr. H. H. Hawkins, Mrs. Eula Kennedy, local Republican leader, presided.

Despite the short notice, the meeting was well attended by a number of enthusiastic party supporters.

MOTHER OF RUDY'S FORMER WIFE SAILS TO PROTECT RIGHTS

JUAN LES PINS, France, Oct. 13.—"I am sailing for America on the Aquitania on Saturday to protect my interests in the Valentino will," declared Mrs. Therese Werner today.

Mrs. Werner, aunt of the second wife of the late Rudolph Valentino, was made a beneficiary under Valentino's will, which it is reported will be contested by the brother and sister of Valentino.

"I hope there won't be any trouble," said Mrs. Werner. "They can't charge that I influenced Rudy, since I wasn't there when the will was drawn up."

Asked if she might renounce part of her rights under the will to prevent litigation, Mrs. Werner said: "I can't say what I will do, since I don't know the law, but I don't believe the clause providing that the brother and sister lose their rights if they contest the document will be exercised. I can't imagine anyone pressing such a claim."

MEDICAL STUDENT ON TRIAL IN DEATH

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 13.—Haggard and careworn and looking far different than the well-groomed, debonair medical student who sought the favor of his sweetheart with passionate love letters and poetry, Ermit "Frenchy" Balanescu appeared in the court room of Judge Carl V. ## Princess Hermine Denies Kaiser Is To Return To Germany As Rumored

Princess Hermine, wife of the ex-Kaiser, made this statement today in the course of an exclusive interview with the International News Service in the historic picturesque Saabor Castle, where the correspondent had come to secure first-hand verification of rumors and reports published all over the world during the past few days that William II planned to return to Germany.

These rumors had arisen through paragraph seven of the new compromise plan between the Prussian state and the House of Hohenzollern, a compromise plan for the indemnification of the Hohenzollerns which has caused two days of riotous disorders in the Prussian Diet.

MELLETT COUNSEL ASKS DISMISSAL OF $100,000 SUIT

Action To Save Stark County Officials Chagrined Said

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 13.—Rather than run a risk of embarrassing Stark County officials in their effort to convict the slayers of her husband, Don R. Mellett murdered publisher of the Canton Daily News, Mrs. Mellett's attorneys today announced they will ask dismissal of the $100,000 civil damage suit filed against Louis Mazer.

The suit, now pending in federal district court here, will be refiled later when the murder trials of Mazer, Patrick McDermott and Ben Rudner are finished.

The move was taken to block efforts of Mazer's attorneys, who sought to obtain information of the testimony to be given by state witnesses in the murder trial by having issued subpoenas and orders for the taking of depositions from these witnesses in connection with the civil suit. This would have resulted in Mazer's lawyers obtaining advance information of the testimony which the state witnesses will offer in the murder trials, Mrs. Mellett's counsel explained.

PARENTS AND UNCLE QUESTIONED AS TO MYSTERY IN DEATH

Kidnapping Idea Abandoned In Official Probe

EAST ORWELL, O., Oct. 13.—With every law enforcement agency in Ashtabula County concentrating its efforts today, mystery still shrouded the "mucklacks murder" of little Isabel Zandarski, 3, whose body was found in a tamarack swamp a mile and a half from her home late yesterday.

The child disappeared during the night from the home of her parents on September 21 and other children sleeping in the room with her reported that "a big black man" carried Isabel away.

Her body, with the skull crushed, apparently by a blow from a club, was found in the swamp, lying face downward in the mud of the swamp, late yesterday, by Floyd Congdon, a squirrel hunter. Indications were that the child had been murdered and her body carried to the swamp immediately after her disappearance, as her feet and clothing showed no sign of her having walked through the thick swamp undergrowth to the spot where she was found.

Parents of the child and Frank Knurick, 18, her uncle, who slept in an adjoining room on the night she disappeared, have been questioned at length by the county officers since the baby disappeared.

The mother declared she had punished the child, who had immediately gone to sleep and had then been put to bed. She was never seen again. The uncle declared he heard a dog barking during the night, shortly before the disappearance of the child was discovered by the mother at 3 a. m., when the latter got up from her bed and went into the room occupied by the children.

A kidnapping theory advanced when the baby disappeared was scouted by Sheriff H. D. Hannum as the parents have never received any demand for ransom and were tenant farmers, in extremely modest circumstances.

The blow on the skull killed the child, according to the findings of Dr. Ernest Crockett, of Ashtabula, and Dr. J. H. Ross, who performed an autopsy.

Questioning of the uncle, Knurick, and of the parents was resumed by the sheriff today.

Sheriff Hannum early this morning took Knurick to his office in the county jail at Jefferson for questioning. He is being held there temporarily. No charges have been filed against the child's uncle.

The officer declared that reports of threatened violence at Orwell were "ridiculous" and that he had removed Knurick to Jefferson because there is no jail at Orwell.

MRS. HOWARD CONFER SUCCUMBS IN DAYTON AFTER BRIEF ATTACK

Mrs. Nora Givanev Confer, 55, wife of Howard Confer and former resident of Xenia, died at her home 715 N. Broadway, Dayton at 11:30 Tuesday night. Death was caused by a heart affection and she was ill only half an hour, although she had been in delicate health for two years.

Mrs. Confer was born near Yellow Springs, and was a lifelong resident of Greene County. The Confer family lived in Xenia for ten years before moving to Dayton to make their home, about two years ago.

Surviving Mrs. Confer are her husband, four children: Howard, Jr., of Freeport, L. I.; George William, Stanley and Mrs. Mildred Lott, of Dayton and a sister, Mrs. Olive Kaiser of Springfield. Announcement of Mrs. Confer's death has caused much grief among her Xenia and Greene County friends, by whom she was greatly beloved.

She was a member of Trinity Church while in Xenia and had transferred her membership to the Riverdale M. E. Church, Dayton.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Friday at 2 p. m., and interment will take place in Glen Forest Cemetery, Yellow Springs.

PARIS VOTED FOR 1927 LEGION CONVENTION AT PHILADELPHIA

Scene Of World's Feud Selected Reunion City For Buddies

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 13.—Today the American Legion votes to place its 1927 convention in Paris, a "ten year after" affair.

Sometime during the day, the "time and place" committee will report unanimously in favor of taking the legion back to the land of the World War battle sites for next year's meeting place. Already the convention has indicated its intention to visit Paris in 1927, despite isolated protests made on the ground that anti-American sentiment in France is too strong to permit a reunion there at "such an early date."

The convention committee will recommend that the legion go to Paris and "adjourn in New York."

The latter is an answer to the objection raised that, under the constitution granted by congress, one meeting yearly must be held in the continental United States. The legionnaires, under this proposal, would hold their full convention in France and then permit ultimate ratification of their projects after return to America, by a committee of one each from the delegations holding voting power.

The Pershing to elect General John J. Pershing as the next national commander, however, threatens to be upset. The World War commander, it is understood, has advised a special committee that he is not available for the position, citing his advanced age and the arduous nature of the work as his reason for declining.

The whole matter of politics will be fought out in the next thirty-six hours. Some delegations still hold out to draft the general, if he will not accept otherwise. The more general disposition, however, is to respect Pershing's wishes in the matter and all delegates are waiting for a final word before sun down today.

In the event Pershing refuses to become a candidate, the field widens to four men, Howard Savage, of Illinois; E. E. Spafford, of New York; J. Williams, of South Dakota; and Thomas Armory Lee of Kansas. Of these four, it was the general consensus of opinion that the fight would rest between Savage and Williams, with the remaining two holding sufficient votes to force the election into several ballots.

The District of Columbia, pledged to Pershing in common with many others, may start a boom for Colonel Billy Mitchell if "Black Jack" withdraws.

It was not expected, however, that the deposed air chief would make much headway toward legion leadership.

Between now and Friday morning the question will be fought out. If Pershing permits his name to be placed in nomination, his election is a certainty. If he refuses, the business will be fought on sectional lines, with four states competing for the honor.

CHOSEN HEAD

ADOPTION OF NEW LIBRARY LAW WILL BRING MANY ADVANTAGES

Circulators and signers of the library petition as well as all other friends of the Greene County Library will be interested to know that more than 900 signatures above the number required by law were secured. The petition has been duly filed in the probate court, heard by the probate judge and certified to the board of elections.

The total county vote at the last gubernatorial election was approximately 12,000. Twenty-five per cent of this number or slightly more than 3,000 signatures were necessary to make the petition legal.

As a result of the support given the project, 3,949 signatures were secured for the petition. This number represents in almost equal proportions, city, villages and rural communities.

The question of placing the Greene County Library under the County Library District law will be submitted to the electorate November 2.

The ballot will read: "Shall there be created a Greene County Library District?" A majority vote of "Yes" is necessary to carry the measure.

"Greene County is now paying about $3,000 toward library support. When heat, light, janitor service and the salaries of the librarians have been paid from this, there is little, if any, left for books. There are never enough new books to meet the demand. There is never enough money for even a few new books and for keeping old books in good repair at the same time. The one thing our County Library is well stocked with is worn-out, dirty books," said a Library official today.

If the County Library District plan passes the following advantages will be available, it is said:

1. Plenty of clean, new books.
2. The best recent books on all subjects.
3. Better school libraries.
4. In addition, good circulating libraries for schools and other community centers.
5. A skilled county worker to get acquainted with all parts of the county, to study the needs and tastes of all communities in the county district.
6. Books delivered to communities and to schools regularly at reasonable intervals by book-wagon, to individuals in emergency by parcel post.
7. Overhead cost reduced to a minimum with a maximum of service.

The total cost of such advantages is so small as to be almost negligible. Library maintenance under the County Library District law must come under the fifteen mill limit. Where this limit has been reached, there will be no additional cost, but a readjustment of funds. Where this limit has not been reached, the additional cost for library support will be at the rate of one and one-half cents on a property valuation of $100, or fifteen cents on a $1,000 valuation, or $150 on a $10,000 valuation, and so on.

In other words, adequate first-class library service to homes, communities, and schools may be had by all for less than the cost of one standard magazine per year or one new book.

The County Library District is the only means of obtaining good library service at a reasonable cost. Sums of $15,000 to $40,000 per mile are paid to build our roads.

The following organizations have already endorsed the measure: The Greene County Farm Bureau; Pomona Grange; The Greene County Medical Association; The Greene County W. C. T. U.; The Kiwanis Club; The Central P. T. A.; Xenia; The Woman's Club; The A. C. Turrell W. C. T. U.; The Spring Hill P. T. A.

Having signed the petition is not enough. Come out and vote "Yes" for the County Library District, and ask your friends to do the same. Sample ballots will be distributed through the county soon. Be sure that you know how to make them express your appreciation of books.

BRITISH ARMY WILL LIGHTEN BURDEN

ALDERSHOT, Oct. 13.—Can the British Army be relieved of the burden of his pack when marching to the fighting line?

This is the problem which the present British Army manuevers at Aldershot are trying to solve.

The main idea is to find out how much of the burden carried by every soldier in the fighting line may be transferred from his shoulders to the first line transport made up entirely of motor-vehicles.

The question is asked: Can the soldier go into battle with little more baggage than his weapons, ammunition and clothes he stands in, and can he rely upon motor-transport to carry his other belongings—coats, pack, haversack, rations, field-dressings, and so on,

If these questions are answered satisfactorily, then the soldier in future will go into battle metaphorically "stripped to the buff" instead of carrying a load weighing anything up to eighty pounds.

C. FRANKLIN RIDENOUR

MARRIES SOUTHERN GIRL

Much interest is felt in Xenia in an announcement which was made from Xenia yesterday of the marriage of Mr. C. Franklin Ridenour, publisher of the Xenia Call, former Xenia newspaper man, and Miss Belle Lee of Atlanta, Ga. Their marriage was celebrated in The Little Church Around the Corner, New York, Monday.

Mrs. Ridenour, member of an old southern family, has just returned from a trip around the world, and has been living temporarily in New York where she was joined by Mr. Ridenour who went East to greet her upon her arrival in this country.

The romance of the former Xenian and his southern bride commenced two years ago when they met on a European trip. Mrs. Ridenour was a business woman and writer, and for two years prior to starting a round the world trip several months ago, had made her home in Miami, Fla.

Mr. Ridenour began his newspaper work in Xenia and for a number of years was on the staff of the Evening Gazette and Morning Republican.

GREENE COUNTY W. C. T. U. LAYS PLANS AT EXECUTIVE MEETING

One new member for every twelve.

This is to be the slogan for the membership campaign of the Greene County W. C. T. U. during the coming year. It was adopted at the county executive meeting at the First Baptist Church this city, Tuesday.

During the year the union plans to emphasize the work of the following departments: Peace, Mrs. Cora Linton, superintendent; Anti-narcotics, Mrs. John Harner, superintendent and Scientific Temperance Instruction, Miss Lella Quinn, superintendent. The contest department will be merged with the Christian Citizenship department, with Mrs. Lester Oglesbee, superintendent, and the department will take up contest work throughout the county during the coming twelve months. The medal contest plan will be used.

Recommendations were made by the executive body that the courts increase fines to bootleggers and give them jail sentences and take the privilege of operating motor cars from drunken and reckless drivers. Members of the union were also urged to visit the courts in order to secure a better knowledge of their working and to also take an interest in the schools by visiting them. Mother and daughter and father and son banquets for each union in the county during the coming year were also recommended.

Interest in securing more humane laws for the mentally ill, was stressed at the meeting. This matter was taken up first at the county convention several weeks ago when Dr. H. R. McClellan, superintendent of the Dayton State Hospital addressed the convention. At that time Dr. McClellan left blanks to be distributed among members of the union for the purpose of securing signatures which will swell the petition which the society for the Aid of the Mentally Ill will present to the next legislature in the interest of securing adoption of better laws, for the treatment of the insane. These blanks were distributed at Tuesday's meeting to women who had not yet secured them.

Other announcements made at the meeting were that the county union has placed in the library copies of Crane's "Tobacco the Assassin of Liberty" and "School of Demonstration," by Prof. Gregg, president of Lincoln Neb., University, as well as arranging to have the poster of the Council for the Prevention of War, "America First" placed in all churches, schools and clubs.

The proposal to erect a permanent W. C. T. U. building on the Miami Valley Chautauqua grounds at Franklin, in which Greene County will be interested with twelve other counties in this part of the state, was discussed. For a number of years the thirteen counties maintained headquarters in a tent on the Chautauqua grounds. Later a shack was erected, but the plans now materializing will probably result in a permanent and substantial structure.

A citizen's committee to be appointed by the W. C. T. U. will work to get out the vote on election day, the executive body decided.

Plans were made whereby the county union will make a gift of cookies, jellies, canned fruits and confections to the invalid veterans in the National Military Home Hospital at Dayton. The members are also solicited for rags which can be used in the hospital to make the invalids make. The men sell these rags and are permitted to keep the money secured after the materials used are paid for. Mrs. E. C. Moorman is the county leader for this work. Mention was

BIBLE STORY TAKEN AS SERMON SUBJECT

The Rev. W. R. Cain, evangelist at the Church of the Nazarene, preached Tuesday night from the text, "One Thing Thou Lackest." "The Bible," said the Rev. Mr. Cain, "is full of tragedies, and this incident of the rich young ruler is one of them. He came running to Jesus anxiously inquiring the way to holiness and yet he went away sorrowful, notwithstanding that he was within arm's length of the goal. He went away, despite the fact that it was his first and only chance, also regardless of his influence on others. And as he went away, he went, a lost soul."

"A special song, 'He sets me free' was sung before the sermon. After the sermon, four persons knelt at the altar.

Services will be held at the church each night this week including Saturday, at 7 o'clock.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overeating, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat. If you are over stout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

TOTAL COUNTY DEBT LOWERED SLIGHTLY DURING LAST YEAR

It is indicated in an abstract prepared by County Auditor R. O. Wead showing Greene County's bonded indebtedness at the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1926, that the county, taken as a whole is evidencing a general tendency to work its way out of debt.

While the city schools, county schools and the twelve townships indicated reductions in their bonded indebtedness during the year, the county, taken separately, and villages showed increased debts.

The general outstanding county debt increased $39,642.69. The county debt stood at $460,550 June 30, 1925 and although $66,100 in bonds was redeemed, new bond issue amounting to $105,742.69 outstanding this year, brought the total debt June 30, 1926 to $500,192.69. A balance of $202,087.40 exists in cash and investments in the interest and sinking fund with which to meet it, leaving the actual debt at $298,105.29.

The combined debt of the eight villages stands at $98,841.44 June 30, 1926, an increase of $12,841.44 during the fiscal year. Sum of $17,350 in bonds was redeemed but new bond issues amounted to $30,691.44. The villages have a balance of $32,309.79 in the interest and sinking fund.

Bonded indebtedness of the combined twelve townships was lowered $5,000 from $18,000 to $13,000 during the year. The townships were so well off financially that $5,000 in bonds was redeemed and no new bond issues were found necessary. However, the townships have but $1,037.80 in the interest and sinking fund.

Xenia city schools brought about a debt reduction of $22,342.49 during the twelve-month period, from $702,000 to $679,657.51. They redeemed $40,000 in bonds and new bond issues totaled only $17,657.51 showing a healthy financial situation. The city schools have a $16,519.29 balance in the interest and sinking fund.

County schools also showed a trend of debt reduction, lowering their total financial obligations $30,236.68, from $540,463.28 to $510,226.60. A portion of this debt $35,381.19, was wiped out by redeeming bonds, new bond issues amounting to but $5,144.51. County schools also show a balance of $23,183.11 in the interest and sinking fund.

The total debt of Greene County, including the general county, city and county schools, townships and village debts was lowered $5,995.04.

DIVERSE VIEWS ON SPORTS

Many people, the joke-smiths and the cartoonists take great delight in poking fun at the golfers. Those at the poking end consider it a meaningless pastime. The motorist considers walking a useless waste of effort, and the hiker luxuriating in his brisk walk, can not appreciate the joy of motoring. Opinion is divided between baseball and football as the greatest American sport. Tennis players seldom play golf, and vice versa. Those who favor summer sports frequently are not attracted by winter games of pool, bowling, cards and basketball.

Thus it would seem that views on sports are as divergent as the sports themselves. First there are groups which consider sports of all shapes and descriptions of little or no value either for health or pastime. Opposing it are two groups which in turn oppose each other. One of these latter recommends sports for exercise and health. The other considers sports only in the light of recreation.

Beyond a shadow of doubt there are few men, women or children who do not participate in some sport. Every sport has its following. Each following credits its favorite pastime with superior powers of exercise and recreation. This is natural among patriotic people. But which sport is the perfect or nearest perfect can never be determined and is of little consequence. What we are concerned with is healthful exercise and recreation. Every game possesses these qualities in varying degrees. As long as everybody is getting exercise and recreation in some form or other, the sport has served its purpose.

FOR MEN STILL ARE BOYS

With her hold a writhing, crawling mass of fantastic sea life, and her crew aglow with bizarre tales of the strange waters they had seen, the little schooner "Blossom" has just come home.

The "Blossom" less than a third as big as the ship in which Columbus discovered America, was sent forth by a rich woman of Cleveland, Ohio, to cull unknown waters and islands and bring back rare specimens for her city's natural history museum.

The little schooner was gone for more than three years. Some of her men turned back, yellow with fever or mal de mer. Mutinies aboard. Times of thirst and hunger. But the "Blossom" kept on.

Now she is home again. Captain George Finlay Simmons has exchanged the thrill of fighting sharks and jagged-toothed rip fish for the thrill of lurching at tired business men's clubs and telling them of those three years upon a far-off sea.

He tells them of giant turtles that capsize boats as a whale might lash a canoe. He tells of the graveyard of Mother Carey's chickens where the bleached bones of thousands of birds stick to the spent lava of old volcanoes.

He is Robinson Crusoe and the entire Swiss Family Robinson. He is a modern Jules Verne to those noonday chicken patty eaters. He is Herman Melville with his white whale and crazed sea captain.

The noon hour becomes two, three hours, and still they listen. For men become great business powers, but at heart they ever remain the boys who longed to be Crusoe's Friday, or one of the Swiss Family Robinson young, and who even today would change a bank director's chair for the crow's nest of a whaler.

THE WEAKER SEX

Much has been said and written regarding the "weaker sex". Especially has this been true since two American women swam the channel. It is pointed out that in doing so they have proved to the world that the weaker sex is really more enduring in some forms of physical exertion than are those belonging to the "stronger sex." However, there is an advantage which women have in this respect. The channel water is cold, and it takes one who can endure long exposure to cold water to master the channel swim. Women are better endowed by nature to do this. They not only accustom themselves to it by the lighter clothing they wear, but they are better insulated than are men. The female of the species has a thin layer of fat just under the skin, which makes her less sensitive to cold than a man. This physiological advantage gives her a better chance in such stunts as long distance swimming in cold water. Of course, woman might be able to beat a man anyhow, but his peculiar envelopment of fatty tissue, gives a man a chance to claim that as the reason.

One of the best ways to train a careless motorist is to impress on him that all streets traveled by the careless or drunken driver lead straight to jail.

"STEALING OF BRIDE"

Another incident of the pioneer wedding deals with the "stealing of the bride."

"On the evening after the ceremony, about 9 or 10 o'clock, a deputation of young girls stole off with the bride and put her to bed."

"In doing this, it frequently happened that they had to ascend a ladder instead of a pair of stairs, leading from the dining and ball room to the loft, the floor of which was made of clapboards, lying loose and without nails."

"This ascent, one might think, would embarrass the bride and her attendants, but as the foot of the ladder was commonly behind the door, which was purposely left open for the occasion, and its rounds at the inner ends were well hung with hunting shirts, petticoats and other articles of clothing with the candles on the opposite side of the house, the exit of the bride was noticed by but few."

SAN FRANCISCO TO GET BETTER HARBOR

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13.—Within a few months San Francisco will have a harbor entrance the equal of any in the world, according to Major J. W. N. Schulz, army engineer in charge of rivers and harbors.

He announced that the work of dredging the main ship channel over the bar, begun three years ago, soon will be completed. "This project," Major Schulz said, "cost a million dollars and provides for a channel one and a half miles long, 2000 feet wide and forty feet deep. The channel has been dredged to a depth of forty and one-half feet for a width of 1,800 feet."

The plans call for an over-depth to forty-two feet, which will allow the largest vessels to pass out straight from the Golden Gate. It will not be necessary for ships to take either north or south channel."

Several weeks ago for the first time in history the entire United States fleet passed out through the new channel.

Major Schulz announced that in a short time surveys will be started designed to give forty feet of water along the entire San Francisco waterfront for a distance of 2,000 feet from the shore line.

OF

New York

By Jack O'Donnell

Anne Brockman is a successful artist because Anne thinks fast and paints well. Several years ago when she came here from Seattle, Washington, she learned that to succeed in New York one must needs grasp opportunities when opportunities present themselves. She hasn't forgotten that, and as she specializes in painting babies for the covers of many of the best women's magazines she is always on the lookout for "subjects."

The other day one of her friends who had become a mother since their last meeting called at Anne Brockman's studio in West Twentieth Street. The mother had her two-year-old daughter, Joan, with her.

Greetings were hardly completed when Anne, looking the baby over, through eyes that were quick to detect beauty, called to her husband: "Quick, Billy! Stretch a canvas for me and bring my sketching materials. I've found a beautiful baby!"

And in five minutes she had sketched Joan, whose smiling face you will see on the cover of some magazine in the near future.

A young man started an international travel bureau for himself in New York recently. He had come here from a small town in Ohio, but the city held no terror for him. When friends expressed some uncertainty as to his success because of his youth (he was only twenty-four) he said: "I've fixed that." Then he exhibited his letter-head. At the top, above the firm name, was the legend: "Backed by twenty four years of experience."

Even on a bleak Sunday morning Fifth Avenue is crowded. Church goers and promenaders. Here comes a Britisher, blue cheeks and red nose, swinging a swagger stick, looking very much at home in the weather. A woman with high shoes, and a cinder in her eye. Didn't you know you could buy high shoes any more. Urchin in con-skin cap and roller skates. Descendant of Daniel Boone all but the roller skates. Very small chauffeur in a very long French car. His Employer hired him because his diminutive size increased the car's appearance of length. Man who looks like a gunman entering church. Man who looks like a deacon, heading toward Central Park. Woman wearing silk stockings over long underwear. White wings with brush and shovel. Cleanliness is next to godliness. Society leader in squirrel coat, with corsage bouquet of violets. Wonder what Fifth Avenue violets think about on a bleak Sunday morning?

MAKING A SPANISH CAKE
"What is a Spanish Cake?" asks a Bride Reader.
Spanish Cake? Into a large bowl put one-half cup of butter. Cream it till very soft, then rub into it one cup of granulated sugar. Now add two egg yolks previously beaten and mixed with one-half cup of cold, sweet milk. Stir vigorously, then add one and three-fourths cups of ordinary bread flour sifted with three and one-half teaspoons of baking powder and one teaspoon of ground cinnamon. Fold in the stiffly whipped whites of two eggs and beat several minutes. This batter will be yellow, due to the ground cinnamon in it. Turn it into two shallow, square, buttered pans, spreading it high in the corners but keeping it hollow in the center; this method of spreading batter in a pan keeps the baked cake level instead of high in the middle. It is most essential to keep any kind of layer cake level.

Slip the two batter-filled pans into a very hot oven (500 degrees Fahrenheit if you use an oven thermometer). Keep oven temperature at same degree, or thereabouts, for thirty-five minutes, when the cake should have receded slightly from the pans, be delicately browned, and high enough for a layer (three-fourths of an inch).
After baking this cake and cooling it, it is time enough to start cooking the icing. For the following icing, being a cooked one, need not go on a hot cake.
Caramel Icing: Into a saucepan put two heaping tablespoons of butter. Place pan over fire till butter melts, then add one and one-half cups of granulated sugar and one-half cup of cold, sweet milk. Let heat to boiling point, stirring steadily, then add one and one-half squares (ounces) of unsweetened cake-chocolate (or three heaping teaspoons of cocoa-powder mixed to a paste with two tablespoons of hot water). Now do not stir the icing again for twelve minutes. At the end of this simmering period, remove from range, add one-fourth teaspoon of ground cinnamon powder, and beat hard till it is thick enough to spread between the two layers and on top. (Or add a little confectioners' sugar to stiffen it slightly).

NEW NAMES FOR OLD COLORS

"Such a pretty red silk," remarks Aunt Sophia to Mitzi as they pass the shop windows. "Only it isn't red, it's Origo which is a new shade in fall silks," explains Mitzi. Notice her black satin hat with the coque feather on the side and Aunt Sophia's felt hat with flower feathers on the crown. Smart!

"I should love a dress made of that heavenly blue," says Aunt Sophia. "It's called Blurple," replies Mitzi. "Red, brown, green and gray are going to be very much worn this season, too," she adds in the tone of a style authority.

They can't decide about the color. Each model in this window holds up a different colored silk. In the back of the window are symbols of the new colors made by that very popular artist Georgia O'Keeffe. She interprets them in tones, the reds seen in flames, the brown of autumn leaves, the blues of atmospheric haze, the greens of the growing upward plant life, the grays of silvery clouds. Color, of course, is as old as the rainbow, but the smart shades this fall are new at least to fabric, and curiously, to fashion.

FAMOUS ENGLISH GHOST RE-APPEARS

WINDSOR, Eng., Oct. 13.—The Black Lady, Windsor's name for the ghost of Queen Elizabeth, has reappeared at Windsor Castle.

The appearance is connected by old residents with the appointment of a new architect at the Castle, as the legend is that the Queen's ghost is always seen about the ancient battlements whenever there is a change in the personnel of the royal residence.

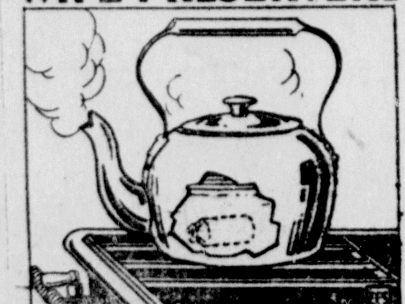

The spirit of Queen Elizabeth, according to Windsor people, is concerned with the welfare of the servants of the Crown responsible for the structural maintenance and repair of the Castle.

The Black Lady is England's most illustrious modern ghost, and has been seen by at least one member of the Royal Family, Princess Alice Countess of Athlone, when she was occupying a suite at the Castle.

The latest appearance of the ghost was from a window of the Saxon Tower, which has been unoccupied for more than a year.

MANHOOD

I sometimes sit and wonder as I see
Men sell their beauty for some petty gain,
Debauch with folly pleasure to attain,
Debase their natures conquerors to be,
If ever from our worst we shall be free?
Or are we destined ever to remain
Unthinking victims of some earlier strain
Which had no vision of nobility?
Man could be gentle, kind and brave and true,
He could be fair, whatever his race or creed,
Yet pressed by selfish interests he will do
Such things which honest men will blush to read.
I tremble, lest some careless hour of mine
Shall stamp me brutal where I could be fine.

LARGE, STILL FOLKS

When you look into people's eyes you may see whole volumes. You may see intelligence there, the warmth of affection or latent love, but greater than all else, I would say, that something, which, let us say, is understanding.

That is why with some you may sit for hours and without a spoken word, be intensely happy.

I like to think of such humans as large, still folks. Tennyson, in speaking of some of his beloved books, used this phrase: "I like these large, still books."

There are so many times in this life that we crave silence—but we want that silence very near to us in the form of someone who understands. So that every touch of beauty that passes, or every sorrow, or disappointment, or every joy, may find its reaction in large, still moments that knit us as one. When worry comes, and confusion of heart, we all need the large still folks about us. Or at least one.

You can never meet a problem by trying to drown it. You can't pass it to others and keep your self respect. But you can go to your large, still friend and gain from him the poise and courage to lead you on.

The story is told of how Tennyson and Carlyle used to visit each other and sit an entire evening before the fire smoking their pipes without saying a word!

Large, still folks!

The masterful men of the world are the quiet ones. Free of all boast kind, sympathetic and gentle—which presupposes great strength.

Walton, at the end of his most famous and beautiful book, puts this quotation:

"Study to be quiet!"

Wills Is Beaten By Sharkey; Thirteen Spells Defeat

BACKHAND BLOW IS WATERLOO; SHARKEY WINS BOUT EASILY

Bar-Room Ethics Cost Blade Gladiator Battle Laurel

By DAVIS J. WALSH
NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Men have been known to stand in awe before the bust of Caesar but to me that's a large laugh, for I saw the bust that was Harry Wills last night, and I think that makes me a connoisseur. It would have been a prize to any collector of rare and well-dressed work. Harry was exceedingly well done and his face was bloody rare in the thirteenth round when he committed the last of a lengthy series of flagrant fouls and Referee Patsy Haley awarded the bout to Jack Sharkey, of Boston, after twelve rounds and forty-three seconds of fighting, or whatever it was. It was a terrible fight and Harry Wills proved to be a terrible fighter.

He was the same Wills who harassed one heavyweight champion out of his title and forced his successor to seek that haven of refuge known as the color line; the same Wills whose name prompted governors and men high in the councils of political intrigue to shudder convulsively and reach for the pulse warmer.

He was the same Wills he always has been, a terror if they allowed him to use the polite ethics of the bar-room. But they didn't let him do it last night and Wills didn't win a round of the twelve and a fraction that were fought.

And so the swan song of the man who caused more trouble within the temple of fistiana than any other individual in history was sung and it was one prolonged sour note. The writer enjoyed a weak moment at the end of the third round and, feeling a bit charitable, called the round even.

The rest were all Sharkey. He courageously carried the fight to the man who outweighed him by twenty-six and one-half pounds, left hooked his jaw, almost closed his eyes and pounded his body until it quivered and shook and quailed under the impact. Sharkey, apparently, knew what many another has professed to know these five years, yet hesitated to prove. It seemed that Sharkey knew Harry Wills couldn't fight a lonely lick.

It may have been, of course, that the knave himself to be a very good fighter. Perhaps it was a little bit of both. Anyhow, they called him to the radio before the fight and this is what he said:

"Hello, everybody. This is Sharkey speaking." He had started to move away from the microphone when the announcer suggested that he tell the fans something. So he returned and added:

"I'm going to beat Wills tonight as sure as h—."

Like the Virginian, he said it with a smile, but that only served to emphasize the seriousness of his conviction. That boy knew his victuals. More important still, he apparently knew himself.

He knew that he could hit well, box like a master and laugh off those slow punches the aged Wills was forced to use, because, for once, he was working with a referee who wouldn't let him hold and hit. That is the only kind of fighting Wills has known in years, and last night, with encroaching age showing in his incipient baldness, his flat, shuffling feet and the wrinkles of a mock orange in his face, Harry was less able to carry it through than ever before.

Amazingly strong in the arms but muscle-bound, Wills was pitiful at long range and every time he began pulling Sharkey toward him for that right-hand killer of his, Haley stepped in and broke up the play. However, he was warned times without number, but Harry Wills has been warned by referees before, so his only reply was to back-hand, hit low, use the rabbit and kidney punch, hit on the break and hold and hit. He did everything that was outside the book and finally, in the thirteenth round, when he continued to hit on the break, Haley did what he might have done at any time from the second round on: he waved Wills into his corner and out of the limelight forever. Dempsey simply had the wrong man in the opposite corner at Philadelphia.

To those at the ringside it seemed that Wills was determined to lose on a foul in order to rob Sharkey of the great credit that would have been his due by gaining a decision that was inevitable. His fouls appeared to be deliberate for any other conclusion.

Meanwhile, Sharkey had made a great fight in tearing after Wills from the first bell and scoring often with long left hooks and overhead rights to the head. The punches were a bit high, otherwise, Wills might never have reached the thirteenth round. As it was, the battering of his head, interspersed by a terrible drubbing of the colored man's body, had Harry weaving toward the wrong corner at the end of the second, fifth and ninth rounds and many times on the verge of a knockout.

That was all there was to the occasion: a white man weighing 188 pounds everlastingly beating up a giant negro weighing 214.2 pounds but slower than the flight of the hour hand; a black man whose only ability lay in what the collegians might call unnecessary roughness.

Wills no longer is the man he once was; that is certain. But I am not one of those idealists who must harp upon the ravages of age every time some bozo loses "the duke." Harry probably was no worse last night than he has been during recent years. He simply was teamed up with a very good fighter and a competent referee who called all his shots.

The black nightmare of white heavyweights is decently buried!

TETANUS RESULTS FROM SMALL WOUND

Tetanus which developed in a tiny wound in the foot caused when the child stepped upon the upturned spout of an oil can twelve days ago may cause the death of George Henry Schmalstig, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Schmalstig of the Lower Bellbrook Pike.

Anti-tetanus serum was administered by a physician to whom the parents took the child two days after he received the injury when the foot began to pain. So insignificant was the wound that the parents gave it no concern and thought the boy had sprained his ankle. Early Tuesday morning his condition became suddenly serious with symptoms of tetanus developing. His case is still critical but a slight improvement was noted Wednesday.

TICKETS ON HAND FOR G. O. P. RALLY

The campaign committee of the Greene County Republican Executive Committee, arranging details for the G. O. P. banquet and rally at the Elks' Club Thursday night at 6:30 o'clock, announces a few tickets are still available.

Any persons desiring tickets are requested to call at either the Geyer book store or the County Auditor's office in the Court House.

It is also announced that acceptances of a majority of Republican candidates for state office, assuring their attendance at the rally Thursday, have been received.

In addition all local Republican candidates will be present to swell the gathering.

COACH KOLB GUARANTING CENTRAL SQUAD FOR CONTINUED VICTORY

In addition to preparing his squad for one of the so-called "crucial" games this season of which there are probably many, namely the Washington C. H. battle, Friday, October 15 at Washington C. H., Coach Victor Kolb is faced with the task of banishing a spirit of overconfidence that has seized Central High School gridgers.

This overconfidence has been brought about by decisive victories over the O. S. and S. O. Home, Greenfield and Greenville, in the three opening games.

The return of Abe Rakoff to the line this week has boosted Central's stock several points and Coach Kolb is positive the lineup this Friday will be at least twenty per cent stronger than in any preceding game, if that is possible.

Central will take the field a favorite over Washington for the first time in several years. Coach Kolb will have the best material and the fastest squad that ever went up against the Court House lads in a number of seasons. The rivalry between the two high schools stretches back farther than any other athletic feud within memory of local officials and is therefore considered more important than any other game.

Central rose in its might to defeat Washington unexpectedly in the final football game of the season in 1925 and Coach Kolb is hopeful but not over-confident of again winning. On the other hand the home team will be equally determined to wipe away this smear of last year's defeat.

Washington, however, must meet another model gridiron machine in this year's Central eleven. The Central meritor is keeping his charges busily engaged this week to perfect a fine offense. Washington, to have even a remote chance for victory Friday, must be able to have an airtight defense against the liberal number of forward passes sure to be tried by the Xenia eleven.

GREATEST GRID GAMES OF THE PAST

CORNELL'S FIRST VICTORY OVER HARVARD

For ten years Cornell had unsuccessfully endeavored to defeat Harvard until the Barrett engine machine of 1915 overthrew the Mahan-King-Harte combination in a hard-fought game at the Harvard stadium.

A touchdown by Barrett in the first quarter following a fumble by Mahan on his 25-yard line, the subsequent goal by Barrett and a clever goal from the field by Shiverick in the final period built up the Cornell points.

Incidentally this was the first defeat of a Harvard team since early in 1911 when a nondescript Crimson eleven fell before Glenn Warner's Carlisle Indians.

Mahan was injured early in the game in tackling Barrett and had to be taken out.

"Not Possible To Classify"

By Mack Sauer

HAVE YOU BARGAINITIS?

I am bargain-crazy. Rubber collars have been out of the picture for years, but shove a dozen of them under my nose at half-price and you'll make a sale. I race after cut-prices, like women after ten cent store dish pans.

Last week after receiving my pay check I thought I would go straight home and present the filthy lucre to my wife, but odor of powerful bath soap floated out from a ten cent store and tempted me. I decided to go in and get just one five cent bar of lilac soap.

Thirty minutes later I came out with a dozen coat hangers, three pounds of salted peanuts, a pair of garters for my wife, a dozen phonograph records, a pair of spectacles, a climbing monkey on a string, a package of needles, a bicycle pump, a claw hammer, a package of clothes pins and a couple of bundles of miscellaneous articles too numerous to mention.

While waiting for the car, I chanced to see a small hole-in-the-wall advertising any straw hat in the window for twenty-five cents.

"Cheap, like dirt," yelled the proprietor, coaxingly.

I strolled over and looked them over. Why, he had hats that sold formerly for as high as $5. I felt I could not afford to pass up such bargains, and left the store with three "Imported Straws," thinking what an idiot he was to sell them at such low prices.

"Twenty-five dollar set German books $2.50" was the sign that next attracted me. Surely here was the bargain of a life-time. Altho I cannot read a word of German I bought them.

The only reason I did not buy a used car and a house and lot was because I did not have the down payment. Several advertisements sounded so good that I answered them, grieving because I could not make the purchases.

I promised my wife I would lead a better life and swear off buying bargains. But tonight I saw a bass drum advertised for $1.67. I bought it. She saw me coming home with the drum and beat it. I don't know if she will return or not. If she doesn't, I got a bargain at last.

OUT OF THE ETHER

As they cut off his leg,
Jim said with a leer
To the surgeon at hand,
"What's comin' out here?"

A man by the name of Canary has been arrested, the opinion being that he is a jail-bird. By the way, canaries, pets, poultry, and livestock are often advertised for sale on this page. Just phone your ads to Phone 111 tomorrow.

FROM TENTH STORY

As he fell from the roof,
Said Hiram D. Gory
To a workman near by
"That's another story."

Sayre, the druggist says he dreamed about me the other night. He then spits it all by saying he has been dreaming of the craziest things lately. Anyway, I'd like to have one of those fine sodas he serves down there. I know of no bargain quite so good in Xenia, unless it is an ad on this page. Phone an ad to 111 tomorrow.

"SCAR-FACE AL" PLEADS FOR PEACE IN GANG WARFARE

along all right and 'Nails' began bringing fellows into the crowd—
Dean O'Banion, 'Schemer' Drucel, Louie Alterie, 'Hymie' Weiss and others.

"Finally these fellows began to make a little money and forgot we were the ones who gave them their chance and put them in business.
They began thinking they were bigger than we were. Then they told us they were going in business for themselves. Well, that was all right with us. We figured there were customers for all the beer in the world and they were welcome to those they could dig up, so we let them go.

"There wasn't any bad feeling between us but pretty soon they began to act nasty. 'Nails' and O'Ban-ion had been killed and the other guys were felling chesty. Finally, we had to talk to them about it.
On a Monday, we had a meeting and told them to stay in their yard and behave themselves or we'd have to scold them. They told us they'd quit what they were doing.
On Saturday afternoon, they shot
Torrio in his car beside his wife.

"John knew who shot him, all right. He saw them. But he wouldn't put the finger on them (identify them). He was willing to forgive and forget. We talked to them again. I talked to 'Hymie' Weiss and the others, saying: 'What do you want to do, die before you're thirty? I don't. I've got a kid and I don't want to leave him. Johnny is willing to call it even right now if you fellows will.'

"They said all right and we started over. We kept our bargain but they broke theirs. They took my driver—a boy that didn't know any more about our affairs than you do —for a ride, tortured him and threw him into a cistern.

"The next week, 'Schemer' Drucel, with 'Hymie' Weiss, was shot at in Michigan avenue. A couple of weeks after that, eleven cars drove past this hotel at noon and gave us a machine-gun fire that made this street look like a battlefield.

Last week, right after that, we arranged a meeting in the Sherman hotel. I sent Tony Lombardo, my friend and the head of the Unione Siciliano, to talk for me. I told Tony we that wanted peace. Weiss said that we could have it—if we'd put those two fellows that had figured in the Michigan avenue shooting on the spot.

"Tony didn't ask him who he meant, but he told him—and he meant—talking for me when he said it —that we wouldn't do that to a yellow dog. And the meeting broke up."

"What do you think of the killing Monday?" Capone was asked.
"I think it was butchery," he said in a quiet, low voice. "Hymie" was a good kid. He could have got out long ago and taken his life and been alive today."

being considerably more complicated than that of the crown prince, there is no telling how many years it would take to clear the way for his return after he had once expressed the wish through regular channels. Moreover—although Princess Hermine did not say so—the correspondent has reason to believe that the ex-kaiser's pride would prevent him from asking a Republican government's permission to return.

After all, that permission would be an indispensable condition.

Asked about the ex-kaiser's health, Princess Hermine said, "I am glad to say he is very well and has overcome the gripe, from which he suffered in August."

"I will be glad to return to Doorn to be with the kaiser on the birthday of the late Empress Augusta Victoria, which we always observe as one of the consecrated days of the year."

The Girl Who Dared

By May Christie

Chapter XXV
THE DEMON JEALOUSY
Mary was thankful of the respite. But, alone, her thoughts were in a turmoil. She was roused by the jangling of the telephone. Shivering with chill and nervous apprehension, she got out of bed and went to answer it.

The voice was Philip's. Cold, remote, she thought it sounded. Or was that just her fancy, after the recent warnings?

He was sorry she was indisposed. He had hoped to dance with her tonight. Something rather special was on hand. A competition of some sort. He had wanted her as partner. Oh, yes, he'd had his dinner. He felt fine. Such luck that she wasn't fit enough. He'd telephone her in the morning.

Mary hung up the receiver numbly. Her lips trembled. Not a word of love had Philip uttered! She hadn't given him time, of course. She'd been as curt as he. Mrs. Wade's sharp rebuke to her in front of Philip—that must have lowered her in his eyes—must have made him definitely realize her position in the party as a paid employee, nothing more.

"Cheap!" How the word rankled! How it hurt!

Mrs. Wade bustled in at ten o'clock.

"Feel better? Good! The doctor sent this medicine. Here, take it. He was going out in a hurry or he'd have run up to have a look at you himself."

Would there be any word from Philip? Mary wondered—hoping.

"Are—are any people dancing?" She couldn't help the question.

Mrs. Wade gave a breezy laugh. "Your young man's on the floor, all right. He's with the Stuyvesant child. Oh, right in with the Gilded Set. It's disgusting how that flapper carries on. I'd spank her, if she were my daughter. But money excuses everything."

She went away, and Mary lay there in the darkness, cold and with premonitions, and with a shivery feeling of which the chill was not the only cause.

Music of the band came fitfully up to her. Gay it sounded. Mocking.

She dozed in an uneasy dream. Then waking, looked at the luminous dial of the watch upon her wrist.

Eleven-thirty. Clapping of eager hands below, encoring the dance music.

Philip—with young and rich and pretty Sadie! Oh, she could not bear it!

Sleep came at last—fitful, unhappy, unrefreshing. And in the morning her head ached so terribly she had to stay in bed.

No word from Philip. The telephone was silent.

How hot the bedroom was! She turned and tossed. At half-past ten, after a cup of coffee and two aspirins, she got up to raise the window, letting some air into the overheated room.

Then, glancing downward to the avenue, her heart gave a great and agonizing jump, and seemed to turn right over in her bosom. For, pretty as a picture on her neat, brown mare, sat Sadie Stuyvesant and on a borrowed mount beside her looking oh so handsome and happy sat Philip Andover smiling into Sadie's young alluring face.

A knife twisted in the heart of Mary Forrest. Philip—and this pretty wealthy girl! Riding together into sunshine—laughing—contented, herself totally forgotten.

Mrs. Wade's words came back with agonizing clarity. "Cheap!" She had been that. Now she must pay the price. She stumbled back to her bed one hand pressed to her throbbing forehead.

A tap came at the bedroom door. "It's only me my dear. Feeling better? I hope so because Cyrus and I want to leave tomorrow. We've booked accommodation at the Poinciana in Palm Beach. You'll be fit to travel won't you?" She gave the girl a quick keen look.

"Oh yes." It would be good to get away from here.

"You took that chill in time" Mrs. Wade prided herself on her knowledge of "treatments"

She went away and Mary had a bath and dressed. Her head felt better though her heart was still like lead.

Philip! That other girl! The telephone jangled. Could Philip have come back yet. Was it he? Nervous tremors caught her.

But it wasn't Philip. It was her employer. There were business letters that he must dictate to her. They had "slacked" shockingly of late and would she please come down immediately?

She worked with him till one o'clock. The luncheon-gong had boomed but he looked uncertainly at her.

"The New York mail goes out at three. These letters may need rewriting. Could you do with something in here—a sandwich and coffee?" The little man was worried.

"Oh yes." Mary was glad that this provided an excuse to absent herself from the luncheon-table. The thought of meeting Philip some how was intolerable....

A waiter brought a tray to her.

Cyrus Wade came back a little after two to scan the letters ordering an alteration here and there. Two or three letters were re-dictated.

Then giving her a strange look through his horn-rimmed glasses, he remarked:

"Young Andover was asking after you at lunch. We had a quite a merry party. That young Miss Stuyvesant joined our table."

Another stab in Mary's heart. Merry, were they? So the Sadie girl had taken her place. She hadn't lost much time....

And Philip?

She told herself she hated him. Yet deep in her hurt heart, she knew this was untrue. He might treat her badly—but never could she feel anything but pain—but vain regrets.

She finished her work by three, and crept out for a walk alone. Warm sunshine shone upon her. She went up to the pine woods, hoping.... They were empty.

It was long past tea-time—for

OHIO PREFERENCE PRIMARY MAY PASS INTO STATE HISTORY

COLUMBUS, Oct. 13.—Ohio may dispense with the extra presidential preference primary held every four years, combine it with the regular state and county primary and thus save the voters hundreds of thousands of dollars.

A special committee created by the last legislature is prepared today to recommend to the forthcoming general assembly several changes in the state's election laws.

Under the prevailing system the presidential primary every four years is held in April and four months later, in August, comes the regular state and county primary.

Do away with one of them, hold them both at the same time, and save the state $750,000 quadrennially, the committee will urge the legislature.

The committee also will suggest that the regular state and county primary be held in May instead of in August, as is now the custom. This, the members contend, would give the candidates for elective offices three months additional time in which to wage their campaigns.

The presidential primary every fourth year also would be held in May, at the same time.

Ohio State University boasts of today of a touch of nobility in its student ranks.

Bashwarrad Habtewold, a ward of Ras Tafari, reigning prince of Abyssinia, has been enrolled in the College of Commerce and Journalism. He is the first of his race to ever enter Ohio State University.

Upon his graduation Habtewold plans to return to his native land to enter the royal service.

Cancer could be entirely eliminated within two generations through a study of heredity and selective mating, according to Dr. Maud L. Slye of Chicago.

In an address before the Columbus Academy of Medicine, Dr. Slye said susceptibility to cancer is hereditary and unless both parents have cancerous tendencies their children will not be subject to the disease.

Should one parent be afflicted however, the children will be capable of transmitting it to their offspring in the event they marry persons with cancerous tendencies, Dr. Slye explained.

An agreement may be entered into by six states for the protection of public water supplies, according to Dr. John E. Monger, state health director.

Such an agreement exists today between four states—Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia.

RUBBER PRICES NOW STABILIZED

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—Rubber prices, which alarmed American motorists several months ago

by revealing the tightening tentacles of a great British monopoly, are now stabilized, Harry E. Blythe, vice president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., declared today upon his return to Los Angeles from a several months' survey of European markets.

"I believe the present price of 40 cents a pound for crude rubber will continue with little variation," Blythe declared.

Blythe and William Stephens, production manager of the Goodyear plant at Akron, Ohio, studied the rubber market and production methods in France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, England and Scotland. The largest plant in Europe, Dunlop's at Birmingham, England, is exceeded in size by five plants in the United States, Blythe asserted.

The rubber company officials also are interested in the total absence of traffic regulations in France and in the rapid growth of bus and aeroplane travel in every country of Europe.

28 Washington Cities Paved With Concrete in 1925

Here are three or four facts that should interest property owners, business men and city officials everywhere.

During 1925, 28 Washington cities paved with concrete.

The total yardage of this modern pavement was 1,681,454 square yards.

That was 89 per cent of all the street paving contracts awarded in the whole state of Washington during the year.

There must be some good reasons back of such a marked preference for concrete streets. And there are.

Washington cities are growing. Traffic problems are multiplying. Streets must be built to stand up under modern traffic, and they must do it economically.

Concrete paving exactly meets all requirements. It is permanent. Upkeep and repair costs are negligible. It is a safe surface for motor traffic, in any weather. What's more, it is clean, attractive-looking pavement.

LIVE STOCK VALUED AT $85,198.60 IS MARKETING LOCALLY

Live stock producers of Greene County marketed co-operatively, live stock valued at $85,198.60 at market, reports County Service Manager A. A. Conklin. Forty-nine car floors of stock were consigned by twenty-four shippers. Shipments from this county helped to make up the $1,319,430.86 worth of live stock that was co-operatively marketed during September by thirty-seven county live stock associations, according to a report drawn up by the Live Stock Marketing Department of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

The number of head reported through the co-ops for the month shows considerable increase in hogs and cattle marketed and a slight decrease in sheep and calves over the corresponding month of 1925. Cost of marketing in the thirty-seven counties decreased from 63.6 cents a hundred in September of last year to 60.7 cents. The marketing expense in this county was 45.2 cents.

Approximately 15,000 head of lambs have been distributed in Ohio through the co-operative lamb pool of the co-operative associations working with the National Live Stock Producers Association, says F. G. Ketter of the Federation's Live Stock Department. These lambs, coming to Ohio in ninety-six car floors, represented Ohio live stock men's share of the 120, 000 lambs handled from western territory to corn belt feed lots through the National Co-operative purchasing pool. The lambs were placed in sixteen different counties, and reports from those receiving them indicated complete satisfaction on the western purchases.

The co-operatives are now in the midst of deliveries of feeder stock through the cattle and calf pool which is being handled in the same way as the lamb pool. Cattle are being brought in from Texas, Nebraska and Colorado, direct to the feed lots of the state.

GANGLAND'S INSIDE REVEALED BY LEADER

"SCAR-FACE AL" PLEADS FOR PEACE IN GANG WARFARE

"Butchery" Decried By Leader In News Interview

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Violating all traditions of gangland, "Scar-face Al" Capone, alias Brown, acknowledged leader of the illicit alcohol traffic in Cook County, has talked.

In an amazing interview given in his room at the Hawthorne Inn, in Cicero, Capone reveals for the first time, intimate details of the inside workings of gangland.

The dreaded name of "Scar-face Al" has echoed through all the bloody chapters of Chicago's gang warfare. His notoriety reached a new peak in the mysterious killing of Assistant State's Attorney William McSwiggan and two gangster companions, the latter alleged rivals of Capone.

He was sought, arrested, questioned and, as many times before, released. "Insufficient evidence," said the prosecutors. Now, with the murder of his latest known rival Hymie Weiss, Capone again expects to be arrested and questioned. Meanwhile, he describes this "butchery" and voices a plea for peace.

Capone says: "I've got a boy. I love that kid more than anything in the world. Next to him I love his mother, and then my own mother and my sisters and brothers."

"I don't want to die. Especially, I don't want to die in the street, punctured with machine-gun bullets. That's the reason I've asked for peace."

"I've begged those fellows to put away their pistols and talk sense to me. They've all got families, too. I know I've tried since the first time was drawn in this fight to show them that there's enough business for all of us without killing each other like animals in the street. But they don't see it."

Here Capone launched into his early history. "I was born in Brooklyn. My folks were born there, too. I have to laugh at the way those hoodlums squawk that I'm a foreigner and that I've imported foreigners so that an American hasn't got a chance in this business because of me."

"Seven years ago, Johnny Torrio came to New York and asked me to come out here and go in business with him. I came and Johnny and 'Nails' Morton and myself went into business. Everything went

BELIEVE GANG LEADER SHOT BY PALS; WITNESSES TO SHOOTING TESTIFY AGAINST THUGS

CHICAGO, Oct. 13.—Belief that Earl "Hymie" Weiss, slain gang leader, was shot by two of his pals in a "triple cross" intrigue gained credence today as the coroner's jury continued its investigation.

Weiss and one of his henchmen, Paddy Murray, were killed and W. O'Brien, attorney for Joe Salts, another notorious gangster, charged with murder, was seriously injured in a machine gun ambush in front of Holy Name cathedral here, Monday.

Eye-witnesses to the shooting have testified that Sam Pellar, Weiss' bodyguard, and Ben Jacobs, political friend of Weiss, both of whom were slightly wounded in the gun play, shot and killed the gang leader.

Charles E. McKibben identified both men before the coroner's jury as the two he saw firing point-blank at Weiss. He said, after killing Weiss, Pellar and Jacobs ran and were themselves wounded by the machine gun, mounted in a window overlooking the street.

The authorities are divided in their opinions as to the motive for the shooting. While some credit the theory that Weiss was killed by his own henchmen, others are convinced that the gang leader came to his death at the hands of "Scar-face Al" Capone or members of his gang.

Capone and Weiss were hated rivals in the struggle for control of the beer and alcohol traffic in Chicago and Cook County.

The federal government stepped into the investigation today, determined not only to aid local authorities in solving this crime but to invade the Capone-controlled village of Cicero and break up the vicious ring of liquor-law violators centered there. Before the end of the week, every member of the Cicero police force will have been called before the federal grand jury to tell what he knows of booze graft there.

Another sensational development in the case is the report that spies from none of the powerful police forces have had the home of United States Senator Denten under surveillance and were under orders to assassinate any liquor graft informers who might visit him.

REPRESENTATIVE FROM STATE HEADQUARTERS AT G. O. P. MEET

A plea to the electorate of Greene County to exercise its right of franchise at the November election, was the dominating note stressed by speakers at the initial mass meeting of Republican men and women and party leaders at the E. Main St. Masonic Hall Tuesday evening.

Participating in the opening rally of the campaign in this county, Mrs. Amy Logan, representative from Republican state headquarters at Columbus, told of the increasing prosperity and benefits derived by the Negro race from the administration of the Republican party.

The speaker also made an urgent plea for some form of an educational campaign for women voters that they may vote according to their thoughts and convictions and in a correct manner at the polls.

In addition to describing the part women will play in the election, Mrs. Logan lauded Senator Frank B. Willis, Republican senatorial nominee and Myers Y. Cooper, Republican gubernatorial candidate.

Machinery was also set in motion at the meeting to make a house-to-house canvass of the city in order to impress upon the voters the need of turning out at the polls November 2.

The meeting was also addressed by County Auditor R. O. Wead, chairman of the Greene County Republican Executive Committee and Dr. H. H. Hawkins, Mrs. Eula Kennedy, local Republican leader, presided.

Despite the short notice, the meeting was well attended by a number of enthusiastic party supporters.

MOTHER OF RUDY'S FORMER WIFE SAILS TO PROTECT RIGHTS

JUAN LES PINS, France, Oct. 13.—"I am sailing for America on the Aquitania on Saturday to protect my interests in the Valentini will," declared Mrs. Therese Werner today.

Mrs. Werner, aunt of the second wife of the late Rudolph Valentini, was made a beneficiary under Valentini's will, which it is reported will be contested by the brother and sister of Valentini.

"I hope there won't be any trouble," said Mrs. Werner. "They can't charge that I influenced Rudy, since I wasn't there when the will was drawn up."

Asked if she might renounce part of her rights under the will to prevent litigation, Mrs. Werner said: "I can't say what I will do, since I don't know the law, but I don't believe the clause providing for the interests of the sister and the rights if they contest the document will be exercised. I can't imagine anyone pressing such a claim."

MEDICAL STUDENT ON TRIAL IN DEATH

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 13.—Haggard and careworn and looking far different than the well-groomed, debonair medical student who sought the favor of his sweetheart with passionate love letters and poetry, Ernli "Frenchy" Balanescu appeared in the court room of Judge Carl V. Weygant today to be tried for manslaughter in connection with the death of Dorothy Elizabeth Kirk, attractive 21-year-old stenographer.

But that aura of romanticism, which has surrounded the medical student since the discovery and nationwide publicity given his love letters will not be absent in the court room, where hundreds of women will be waiting, despite their disappointment of Monday, when the case failed to be called after an all-day wait.

No witness for Balanescu will be subpoenaed until after the prosecution opens its fire. Fred Day, attorney for defense, announced.

Princess Hermine, wife of the ex-kaiser, made this statement today in the course of an exclusive interview with the International News Service in the historic picturesque Saabur Castle, where the correspondent had come to secure first-hand verification of rumors and reports published all over the world during the past few days that William II planned to return to Germany.

These rumors had arisen through paragraph seven of the new compromise plan between the Prussian state and the House of Hohenzollern, a compromise plan for the indemnification of the Hohenzollerns which has caused two days of riotous disorders in the Prussian Diet.

Paragraph seven of this compromise plan gives the famous Castle Homburg auf de Hoche to the ex-kaiser and his family. "In case they should return to Germany."

HARRY DAUGHERTY AT COLUMBUS HOME

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 13.—Harry M. Daugherty, former United States attorney general, whose trial in New York on charges of conspiracy to defraud the government resulted in a jury disagreement, returned to his home here today for treatment for eye trouble and a heavy cold.

to return to Germany at this time.

"I can not understand all the excitement in the press about this paragraph," said Princess Hermine. "Is it not perfectly just and logical that the kaiser and his family should desire a home on German soil, after sacrificing for the sake of settlement with the Prussian state so much Hohenzollern property, including so many beloved places, visits to which in former days were a cherished tradition?"

In view of the fact that it took the former crown prince two years to get permission to return to Germany after he had officially registered his request, it is significant that Princess Hermine told the International News Service that the ex-kaiser has taken no steps whatever on his own behalf to return to Germany. His status speaker of the evening following the early and late life of Columbus from the time he first conceived the idea of sailing westward, until he died, forgotten in prison.

DISCOVERER SUBJECT OF BANQUET ADDRESS HERE

The speaker particularly outlined the trials and troubles of the adventurer. He mentioned his Jewish origin and declaring he had few Italian characteristics, gave statistics tending to support his conclusions.

Short talks were also given by Dr. W. A. Galloway, local historian, who reviewed portions of Greene County history and Father David Powers. The address of welcome was delivered by James McCurran, grand knight.

Henry W. Walsh, past grand knight, acted as toastmaster at the banquet. The banquet was served by Catholic Ladies of Columbus.

PARENTS AND UNCLE QUESTIONED AS TO MYSTERY IN DEATH

Kidnaping Idea Abandoned In Official Probe

EAST ORWELL, O., Oct. 13.—With every law enforcement agency in Ashtabula County concentrating its efforts today, mystery still shrouded the "mucklands murder" of little Isabel Zandarski, 3, whose body was found in a tamarack swamp a mile and a half from her home late yesterday.

The child disappeared during the night from the home of her parents on September 21 and other children sleeping in the room with her reported that a big black man carried Isabel away.

Her body, with the skull crushed, apparently by a blow from a club, was found in the swamp, lying face downward in the mud of the swamp, late yesterday, by Floyd Longdon, a squirrel hunter. Indications were that the child had been murdered and her body carried to the swamp immediately after her disappearance, as her feet and clothing showed no sign of her having walked through the thick swamp undergrowth to the spot where she was found.

Parents of the child and Frank Knurick, 18, her uncle, who slept in an adjoining room on the night she disappeared, have been questioned at length by the county officers since the baby disappeared. The mother declared she had punished the child, who had immediately gone to sleep and had then been put to bed. She was never seen again. The uncle declared he heard a dog barking during the night, shortly before the disappearance of the child was discovered by the mother at 3 a. m., when the latter got up from her bed and went into the room occupied by the children.

A kidnaping theory advanced when the baby disappeared was scouted by Sheriff H. D. Hannum as the parents have never received any demand for ransom and were tenant farmers, in extremely modest circumstances.

The blow on the skull killed the child, according to the finding. Dr. Ernest Crockett, of Ashtabula, and Dr. J. H. Ross, who performed an autopsy.

Questioning of the uncle, Knurick, and of the parents was resumed by the sheriff today.

The blow on the skull this morning took Knurick to his office in the county jail at Jefferson for questioning. He is being held there temporarily. No charges have been filed against the child's uncle.

The officer declared that reports of threatened violence against several persons in the county had removed Knurick to Jefferson because there is no jail at Orwell.

MRS. HOWARD CONFER SUCCUMBS IN DAYTON AFTER BRIEF ATTACK

Mrs. Nora Gnaven Confer, 55, wife of Howard Confer and former resident of Xenia, died at her home 715 N. Broadway, Dayton at 11:30 Tuesday night. Death was caused by a heart affection and she was ill only half an hour, although she had been in delicate health for two years.

Mrs. Confer was born near Yellow Springs, and was a lifelong resident of Greene County. The Confer family lived in Xenia for ten years before moving to Dayton to make their home, about two years ago.

Surviving Mrs. Confer are her husband, four children: Howard, Jr., of Freeport, L. I.; George William, Stanley and Mildred Lett, of Dayton and a sister, Mrs. Olive Kaiser of Springfield. Announcement of Mrs. Confer's death has caused much grief among her Xenia and Greene County friends, by whom she was greatly beloved. She was a member of Trinity Church while in Xenia and had transferred her membership to the Riverside M. E. Church, Dayton.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Friday at 2 p. m., and interment will take place in Glen Forest Cemetery, Yellow Springs.

ADOPTION OF NEW LIBRARY LAW WILL BRING MANY ADVANTAGES

Circulators and signers of the library petition as well as all other friends of the Greene County Library will be interested to know that more than 900 signatures above the number required by law were secured. The petition has been duly filed in the probate court, heard by the probate judge and certified to the board of elections.

The total county vote at the last gubernatorial election was approximately 12,000. Twenty-five per cent of this number or slightly more than 3,000 signatures were necessary to make the petition legal.

As a result of the support given the project, 3,949 signatures were secured for the petition. This number represents in almost equal proportions, city, villages and rural communities.

The question of placing the Greene County Library under the County Library District law will be submitted to the electorate November 2.

The ballot will read: "Shall there be created a Greene County Library District?" A majority vote of "Yes" is necessary to carry the measure.

"Greene County is now paying about $3,000 toward library support. When heat, light, janitor service and the salaries of the librarians have been paid from this, there is little, if any, left for books. There are never enough new books to meet the demand. There is never enough money for even a few new books and for keeping old books in good repair at the same time. The one thing our County Library is well stocked with is worn-out, dirty books," said a Library official today.

If the County Library District plan passes the following advantages will be available, it is said:

1. Plenty of clean, new books.
2. The best recent books on all subjects.
3. Better school libraries.
4. In addition, good circulating libraries for schools and other community centers.
5. A skilled county worker to get acquainted with all parts of the county, to study the needs and tastes of all communities in the county district.
6. Books delivered to communities and to schools regularly at reasonable intervals by book-wagon, to individuals in emergency by parcel post.
7. Overhead cost reduced to a minimum with a maximum of service.

The total cost of such advantages is so small as to be almost negligible. Library maintenance under the County Library District law must come under the fifteen mill limit. Where this limit has not been reached, the additional cost for library support will be at the rate of one and one-half cents on a property valuation of $100, or fifteen cents on a $1,000 valuation, or $1.50 on a $10,000 valuation, and so on.

In other words, adequate first-class library service to homes, communities, and schools may be had by all for less than the cost of one standard magazine per year or one new book.

The County Library District is the only means of obtaining good library service at a reasonable cost. Sums of $15,000 to $40,000 per mile are paid to build our roads.

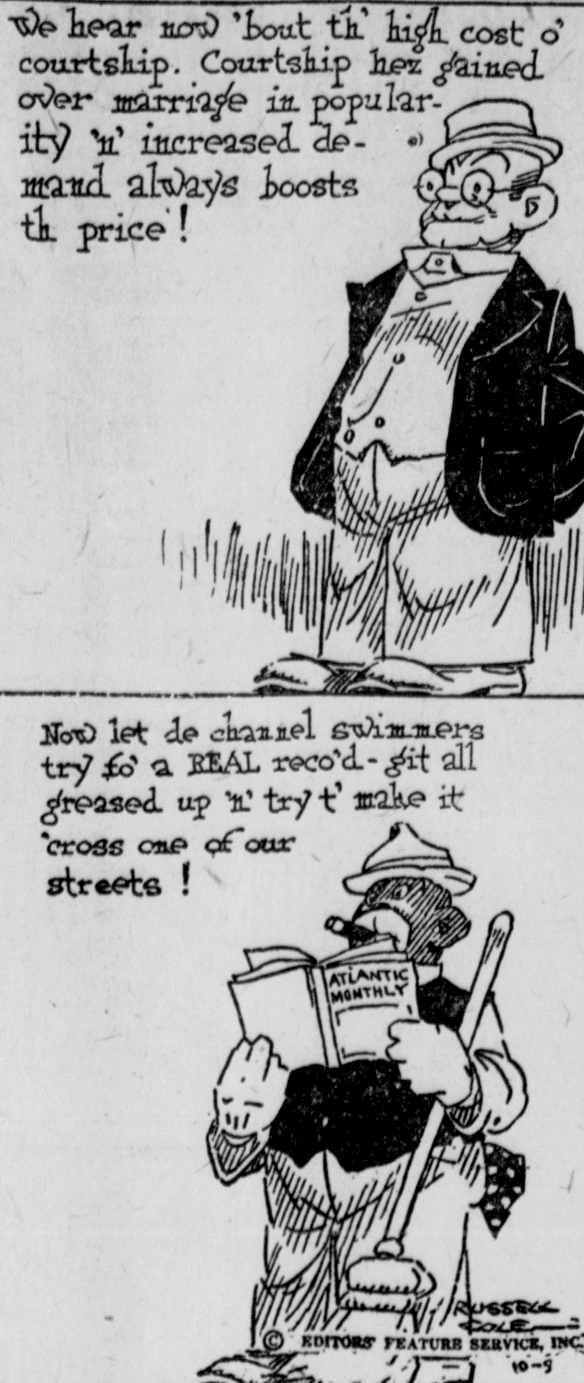

The following organizations have already endorsed the measure: The Greene County Farm Bureau; Pomona Grange; The Greene County Medical Association; The Greene County W. C. T. U.; The Kiwanis Club; The Central P. T. A.; Xenia; The Woman's Club; The A. C. Turrell W. C. T. U.; The Spring Hill P. T. A.

Having signed the petition is not enough. Come out and vote "Yes" for the County Library District, and ask your friends to do the same. Sample ballots will be distributed through the county soon. Be sure that you know how to make them express your appreciation of books.

than United States prices on the same product in New York City. Other shipments of steel coming from Germany are made through the Panama Canal and unloaded in San Francisco at low prices.

The result from this foreign combine, it was said, will increase business from abroad and it is feared will be a formidable competitor of America's leading industry.

In order to protect the steel industry, it is expected that steel men will ask for a higher tariff on imported steel, in order to protect home industry, it was learned here.

BRITISH ARMY WILL LIGHTEN BURDEN

ALDERSHOT, Oct. 13.—Can the British Tommy be relieved of the burden of his pack when marching to the fighting line?

This is the problem which the present British Army maneuvers at Aldershot are trying to solve.

The main idea is to find out how much of the burden carried by every soldier in the fighting line may be transferred from his shoulders to the first line transport made up entirely of motor-vehicles.

The question is asked: Can the soldier go into battle with little more baggage than his weapons, ammunition and clothes he stands in, and can he rely upon motor-transport to carry his other belongings—coats, pack, haversack, rations, field-dressings, and so on,

EUROPEAN TRUST IS STEEL MEN'S WORRY

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 13.—Steel officials in this section are somewhat alarmed regarding the reported plan of several European countries to organize a gigantic steel trust in the near future. It is rumored here that France, Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg and other leading nations in Europe will comprise this organization to compete with the American Steel Industries. Belgium for a time, it was said, disliked the production of steel allotted to her at the conference of representatives from the different countries, and the plan was threatened with failure.

This stumbling block has been removed, it has been reliably learned and now there is no visible obstacle that will prevent the consummation of the combine project.

This large combine may involve a new tariff revision, it was believed by those interested in the steel industry here.

Steel officials are said to be maintaining attitudes of "watchful waiting," although it is believed by those close to official sources they regard the probable gigantic

GREENE COUNTY W. C. T. U. LAYS
PLANS AT EXECUTIVE MEETING

One new member for every made of the immense amount of work for the invalid soldiers at the Home which is done by the Montgomery County W. C. T. U. under the direction of the leader, Mrs. Plessinger, who has personally baked 9,000 cookies for the boys.

This is to be the slogan for the membership campaign of the Greene County W. C. T. U. during the coming year. It was adopted at the county executive meeting at the First Baptist Church this city, Tuesday.

During the year the union plans to emphasize the work of the following departments: Peace, Mrs. Cora Linton, superintendent; Anti-narcotics, Mrs. John Harner, superintendent and Scientific Temperance Instruction, Miss Lella Quinn, superintendent. The contest department will be merged with the Christian Citizenship department, with Mrs. Lester Oglesbee, superintendent, and the department will take up contest work throughout the county during the coming twelve months. The medal contest plan will be used.

Recommendations were made by the executive body that the courts increase fines to bootleggers and give them jail sentences and take the privilege of operating motor cars from drunken and reckless drivers. Members of the union were also urged to visit the courts in order to secure a better knowledge of their working and to also take an interest in the schools by visiting them. Mother and daughter and father and son banquets for each Xenia party made the trip on the special train bearing the Ohio delegation which left Columbus Saturday. The Xenians will return next Saturday. The cadet band has been taking part in the convention program including the parades.

Interest in securing more humane laws for the mentally ill, was stressed at the meeting. This matter was taken up first at the county convention several weeks ago when Dr. H. R. McClellan, superintendent of the Dayton State Hospital addressed the convention. At that time Dr. McClellan left blanks to be distributed among members of the union for the purpose of securing signatures which will swell the petition which the society for the Aid of the Mentally Ill will present to the next legislature in the interest of securing adoption of better laws, for the treatment of the insane. These blanks were distributed at Tuesday's meeting to women who had not yet secured them.

Other announcements made at the meeting were that the county union has placed in the library copies of Crane's "Tobacco and the Assassins of Liberty," and "School of Demonstration," by Prof. Gregg, president of Lincoln Neb. University, as well as arranging to have the poster of the Council for the Prevention of War, "America First" placed in all churches, schools and clubs.

The proposal to erect a permanent W. C. T. U. building on the Miami Valley Chautauqua grounds at Franklin, in which Greene County will be interested with twelve other counties in this part of the state, was discussed. For a number of years the thirteen counties maintained headquarters in a tent on the Chautauqua grounds. Later a shack was erected, but the plans now materializing will probably result in a permanent and substantial structure.

A citizen's committee to be appointed by the W. C. T. U. will work to get out the vote on election day, the executive body decided.

Plans were made whereby the county union will make a gift of cookies, jellies, canned fruits and confections to the invalid veterans in the National Military Home Hospital at Dayton. The members of the union are also solicited for rags which can be used in the hooked rugs the invalids make. The men sell these rugs and are permitted to keep the money secured after the materials used are paid for. Mrs. E. C. Moorman is the county leader for this work. Mention was

BIBLE STORY TAKEN AS SERMON SUBJECT

The Rev. W. R. Cain, evangelist at the Church of the Nazarene, preached Tuesday night from the text, "One Thing Thou Lackest." "The Bible," said the Rev. Mr. Cain, "is full of tragedies, and this incident of the rich young ruler is one of them. He came running to Jesus anxiously inquiring the way to holiness and yet he went away sorrowful, notwithstanding that he was within arm's length of the goal. He went away, despite the fact that it was his first and only chance, also regardless of his influence on others. And as he went away, he went, a lost soul."

"A special song, 'He sets me free' was sung before the sermon. After the sermon, four persons knelt at the altar.

Services will be held at the church each night this week including Saturday, at 7 o'clock.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often at a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place.

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overweight, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the renewed energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat. If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

TOTAL COUNTY DEBT LOWERED
SLIGHTLY DURING LAST YEAR

It is indicated in an abstract prepared by County Auditor R. O. Wood showing Greene County's bonded indebtedness at the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1926, that the county, taken as a whole is evidencing a general tendency to work its way out of debt.

While the city schools, county schools and the twelve townships indicated reductions in their bonded indebtedness during the year, the county, taken separately, and villages showed increased debts.

The general outstanding county debt increased $39,642.69. The county debt stood at $460,550 June 30, 1925 and although $66,100 in bonds was redeemed, new bond issue amounting to $105,742.69 outstanding this year, brought the total debt June 30, 1926 to $500,192.69. A balance of $202,087.40 exists in cash and investments in the interest and sinking fund with which to meet it, leaving the actual debt at $298,105.29.

The combined debt of the eight villages stands at $98,414.44 June 30, 1926, an increase of $12,841.44 during the fiscal year. Sum of $17,850 in bonds was redeemed but new bond issues amounted to $30,691.44. The villages have a balance of $32,309.79 in the interest and sinking fund.

Bonded indebtedness of the combined twelve townships was lowered $5,000 from $18,000 to $13,000 during the year. The townships were so well off financially that $5,000 in bonds was redeemed and no new bond issues were found necessary. However, the townships have but $1,037.60 in the interest and sinking fund.

Xenia city schools brought about a debt reduction of $22,342.49 during the twelve-month period, from $702,900 to $679,557.51. They redeemed $40,000 in bonds and new bond issues totalled only $17,657.51, showing a healthy financial situation. The city schools have a $16,519.29 balance in the interest and sinking fund.

County schools also showed a trend of debt reduction, lowering their total financial obligations $30,226.68, from $540,463.28 to $510,236.60. A portion of this debt $35,381.19, was wiped out by redeeming bonds, new bond issues amounting to but $5,144.51. County schools also show a balance of $23,183.11 in the interest and sinking fund.

The total debt of Greene County, including the general county, city and county schools, townships and village debts was lowered $5,095.04.

DIVERSE VIEWS ON SPORTS

Many people, the joke-smiths and the cartoonists take great delight in poking fun at the golfers. Those at the poking end consider it a meaningless pastime. The motorist considers walking a useless waste of effort, and the hiker luxuriating in his brisk walk, can not appreciate the joy of motoring. Opinion is divided between baseball and football as the greatest American sport. Tennis players seldom play golf, and vice versa. Those who favor summer sports frequently are not attracted by winter games of pool, bowling, cards and basketball.

Thus it would seem that views on sports are as divergent as the sports themselves. First there are groups which consider sports of all shapes and descriptions of little or no value either for health or pastime. Opposing it are two groups which in turn oppose each other. One of these latter recommends sports for exercise and health. The other considers sports only in the light of recreation.

Beyond a shadow of doubt there are few men, women or children who do not participate in some sport. Every sport has its following. Each following credits its favorite pastime with superior powers of exercise and recreation. This is natural among patriotic people. But which sport is the perfect or nearest perfect can never be determined and is of little consequence. What we are concerned with is healthful exercise and recreation. Every game possesses these qualities in varying degrees. As long as everybody is getting exercise and recreation in some form or other, the sport has served its purpose.

FOR MEN STILL ARE BOYS

With her hold a writhing, crawling mass of fantastic sea life, and her crew aglow with bizarre tales of the strange waters they had seen, the little schooner "Blossom" has just come home.

The "Blossom" less than a third as big as the ship in which Columbus discovered America, was sent forth by a rich woman of Cleveland, Ohio, to cull unknown waters and islands and bring back rare specimens for her city's natural history museum.

The little schooner was gone for more than three years. Some of her men turned back, yellow with fever or mal de mer. Mutinies aboard. Times of thirst and hunger. But the "Blossom" kept on.

Now she is home again. Captain George Finlay Simmons has exchanged the thrill of fighting sharks and jagged-toothed rip fish for the thrill of lurching at tired business men's clubs and telling them of those three years upon a far-off sea.

He tells them of giant turtles that capsize boats as a whale might lash a canoe. He tells of the graveyard of Mother Carey's chickens where the bleached bones of thousands of birds stick to the spent lava of old volcanoes.

He is Robinson Crusoe and the entire Swiss Family Robinson. He is a modern Jules Verne to those noonday chicken patty eaters. He is Herman Melville with his white whale and crazed sea captain.

The noon hour becomes two, three hours, and still they listen. For men become great business powers, but at heart they ever remain the boys who longed to be Crusoe's Friday, or one of the Swiss Family Robinson young, and who even today would change a bank director's chair for the crow's nest of a whaler.

THE WEAKER SEX

Much has been said and written regarding the "weaker sex". Especially has this been true since two American women swam the channel. It is pointed out that in doing so they have proved to the world that the weaker sex is really more enduring in some forms of physical exertion than are those belonging to the "stronger sex." However, there is an advantage which women have in this respect. The channel water is cold, and it takes one who can endure long exposure to cold water to master the channel swim. Women are better endowed by nature to do this. They not only accustom themselves to it by the lighter clothing they wear, but they are better insulated than are men. The female of the species has a thin layer of fat just under the skin, which makes her less sensitive to cold than a man. This physiological advantage gives her a better chance in such stunts as long distance swimming in cold water. Of course, woman might be able to beat a man anyhow, but his peculiar envelopment of fatty tissue, gives a man a chance to claim that as the reason.

One of the best ways to train a careless motorist is to impress on him that all streets traveled by the careless or drunken driver lead straight to jail.

The Theatre

By MAURICE HENLE

Football from a novel angle will be seen in Richard Dix's next picture, "The Quarterback." An Akeley camera was placed with the lens just at the level of the ground, between the opposing lines. The result will be an impressionistic view of the tangle that results when two evenly matched teams clash. Another innovation will be a leap that Dix takes with the ball in his hands, over the top of the camera's eye, appearing on the screen as he would look were you lying flat on the ground.

C. C. Pyle made a ten-strike when he signed up "Red" Grange for a motion picture. It is safe to say "Red" has not made his last film. The picture he made has been a success and Grange himself is liked by the public—a combination that is hard to beat. Film fans now are wondering whether Mr. Pyle expects to star Suzanne Lenglen in a film, too. Suzanne is with us as a professional, but as this went to press she hadn't bought a ticket for Hollywood.

Theodore Roberts, old film favorite, who was near death some months ago during a vaudeville tour, has again listened to the call of the two-act. He is back in vaudeville, playing the middle west at this time, recently in Cincinnati.

It looks as though the Wallace Beery-Raymond Hatton combination would be with us for a long time. These two will not play together always, but many films, to judge from present indications, will be seen by the public in which these two will be teamed. They started together in "Behind the Front." This picture proved highly successful. So they were cast together in a naval counterpart of the other picture, "We're in the Navy Now." This will be released in November. Following that they will make "Casey at the Bat," with Wallace Beery in the role of the confident Mr. Casey. No others are announced as yet, but it is safe to say there will be many.

From a runaway orphan to a Metropolitan opera soprano! Mary Lewis, former bathing beauty, appears at Memorial Hall, Dayton, with her will be Ernest Hutcheson, League Course. On the platform with her will be Ernest Hutcheson, internationally known pianist and composer. Miss Lewis commanded attention for the first time in Vienna in 1923 at the National Opera House. She ran away from her foster parents when a child and joined a road show. She was later in Hollywood as a bathing beauty, then in the Ziegfeld Follies and made her "Metro" debut a year ago.

Safety Zones—FOR—Dollars

The Distinction Between Stocks And Bonds

Before an individual can choose logically and profitably from the thousands of available investment securities, it is obvious that he must understand clearly the radical difference between the two common types of securities—stocks and bonds. That the distinction between these types is not always clear in the minds of investors is evident from the fact that bankers and investment dealers are frequently confronted with a request for a "stock-bond," a "stock that represents an absolutely safe speculation," or other securities equally fantastic.

A share of stock is a certificate that represents a proportionate ownership in a business. The stockholders are the owners of a corporate business. Their income, as part-owners of the business is limited to a share of the profits of a company, if a profit exists after payment of all due obligations. When a person buys stock he is supposed to assume consciously all the risks of stock ownership. In the event of failure he must be satisfied with whatever is left after all the bond holders and other creditors have been paid.

A bond, on the other hand, is a credit obligation, and the bondholder is a creditor, not an owner of the business. The contract which he holds binds the corporation to repay him a definite sum of money at fixed date, and to pay him, meanwhile, interest regularly at an agreed rate. Usually he has some kind of security, such as a mortgage on real estate, plants, equipment or other tangible and valuable property, to insure the fulfillment of his contract. In case the borrowing corporation does not live up to any of the conditions of the loan, the investor has the right of foreclosure. The bondholder is a preferred creditor, and he is entitled to receive his principal and interest before the stockholders can receive anything.

The object of a good bond is to approach as near to absolute safety as possible. Every precaution is taken in its issuance to guard its holders against loss. Stocks, on the other hand, frequently subordinate safety to possibility of profit, and, though in certain established and well-managed businesses they may possess all the practical characteristics of a safe investment, they are for the most part more or less speculative.

LARGE, STILL FOLKS

When you look into people's eyes you may see whole volumes. You may see intelligence there, the warmth of affection or latent love, but greater than all else, I would say, that something, which, let us say, is understanding.

That is why with some you may sit for hours and without a spoken word, be intensely happy.

I like to think of such humans as large, still folks. Tennyson, in speaking of some of his beloved books, used this phrase: "I like these large, still books."

There are so many times in this life that we crave silence—but we want that silence very near to us in the form of someone who understands. So that every touch of beauty that passes, or every sorrow, or disappointment, or every joy, may find its reaction in large, still moments that knit us as one. When worry comes, and confusion of heart, we all need the large still folks about us. Or at least one. You can never meet a problem by trying to drown it. You can't pass it to others and keep your self respect. But you can go to your large, still friend and gain from him the poise and courage to lead you on.

The story is told of how Tennyson and Carlyle used to visit each other and sit an entire evening before the fire smoking their pipes without saying a word!

Large, still folks! The masterful men of the world are the quiet ones. Free of all boast kind, sympathetic and gentle—which presupposes great strength. Walton, at the end of his most famous and beautiful book, puts this quotation: "Study to be quiet!"

"STEALING OF BRIDE"

Another incident of the pioneer wedding deals with the "stealing of the bride."

"On the evening after the ceremony, about 9 or 10 o'clock, a deputation of young girls stole off with the bride and put her to bed. In doing this, it frequently happened that they had to ascend a ladder instead of a pair of stairs, leading from the dining and ball room to the loft, the floor of which was made of clapboards, lying loose and without nails.

"This ascent, one might think, would embarrass the bride and her attendants, but as the foot of the ladder was commonly behind the door, which was purposely left open for the occasion, and its rounds at the inner ends were well hung with hunting shirts, petticoats and other articles of clothing with the candles on the opposite side of the house, the exit of the bride was noticed by but few."

SAN FRANCISCO TO GET BETTER HARBOR

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 13.—Within a few months San Francisco will have a harbor entrance the equal of any in the world, according to Major J. W. N. Schulz, army engineer in charge of rivers and harbors.

He announced that the work of dredging the main ship channel over the bar, begun three years ago, soon will be completed. "This project," Major Schulz said, "cost a million dollars and provides for a channel one and a half miles long, 2000 feet wide and forty feet deep. The channel has been dredged to a depth of forty and one-half feet for a width of 1,800 feet.

The plans call for an over-depth to forty-two feet, which will allow the largest vessels to pass out straight from the Golden Gate. It will not be necessary for ships to take either north or south channel."

Several weeks ago for the first time in history the entire United States fleet passed out through the new channel.

Major Schulz announced that in a short time surveys will be started designed to give forty feet of water along the entire San Francisco waterfront for a distance of 2,000 feet from the shore line.

NEW NAMES FOR OLD COLORS

Jay V. Jay

"Such a pretty red silk," remarks Aunt Sophia to Mitzi as they pass the shop windows. "Only it isn't red, it's Origo which is a new shade in fall silks," explains Mitzi. Notice her black satin hat with the coque feather on the side and Aunt Sophia's felt hat with flower feathers on the crown. Smart!

"I should love a dress made of that heavenly blue," says Aunt Sophia. "It's called Blurple," replies Mitzi. "Red, brown, green and gray are going to be very much worn this season, too," she adds in the tone of a style authority.

East Side - West Side

OF

By Jack O'Donnell

Anne Brockman is a successful artist because Anne thinks fast and paints well. Several years ago when she came here from Seattle, Washington, she learned that to succeed in New York one must needs grasp opportunities when opportunities present themselves. She hasn't forgotten that, and as she specializes in painting babies for the covers of many of the best women's magazines she is always on the lookout for "subjects."

The other day one of her friends who had become a mother since their last meeting called at Anne Brockman's studio in West Twentieth Street. The mother had her two-year-old daughter, Joan, with her.

Greetings were hardly completed when Anne, looking the baby over through eyes that were quick to detect beauty, called to her husband: "Quick, Billy! Stretch a canvas for me and bring my sketching materials. I've found a beautiful baby!"

And in five minutes she had sketched Joan, whose smiling face you will see on the cover of some magazine in the near future.

A young man started an international travel bureau for himself in New York recently. He had come here from a small town in Ohio, but the city held no terror for him. When friends expressed some uncertainty as to his success because of his youth (he was only twenty-four) he said: "I've fixed that." Then he exhibited his letterhead. At the top, above the firm name, was the legend: "Backed by twenty four years of experience."

Even on a bleak Sunday morning Fifth Avenue is crowded. Church goers and promenaders. Here comes a Britisher, blue cheeks and red nose, swinging a swaggar stick, looking very much at home in the weather. A woman in high shoes, and a cinder in her eye. Didn't know you could buy high shoes any more. Urchin in coonskin cap and roller skates. Descendant of Daniel Boone all but the roller skates. Very small chauffeur in a very long French car. His Employer hired him because his diminutive size increased the car's appearance of length. Man who looks like a gunman entering church. Man who looks like a deacon, heading toward Central Park. Woman wearing silk stockings over long underwear. White wings with brush and shovel. Cleanliness is next to godliness. Society leader in squirrel coat, with corsage bouquet of violets. Wonder what Fifth Avenue violets think about on a bleak Sunday morning?

MAKING A SPANISH CAKE
"What is a Spanish Cake?" asks a Bride Reader.

Spanish Cake: Into a large bowl put one-half cup of butter. Cream it till very soft, then rub into it one cup of granulated sugar. Now add two egg yolks previously beaten and mixed with one-half cup of cold, sweet milk. Stir vigorously, then add one and three-fourths cups of ordinary bread flour sifted with three and one-half teaspoons of baking powder and one teaspoon of ground cinnamon. Fold in the stiffly whipped whites of two eggs and beat several minutes. This batter will be yellow, due to the ground cinnamon in it. Turn it into two shallow, square, buttered pans, spreading it high in the corners but keeping it hollow in the center; this method of spreading batter in a pan keeps the baked cake level instead of high in the middle. It is most essential to keep any kind of layer cake level.

Slip the two butter-filled pans into a very hot oven (500 degrees Fahrenheit if you use an oven thermometer). Keep oven temperature steady, then add one and one-half squares (ounces) of unsweetened cake-chocolate (or three heaping teaspoons of cocoa-powder mixed to a paste with two tablespoons of hot water). Now do not stir the icing again for twelve minutes. At the end of this simmering period, remove from range, add one-fourth teaspoon of ground cinnamon powder, and beat hard till it is thick enough to spread between the two layers and on top. (Or add a little confectioners' sugar to stiffen it slightly).

FAMOUS ENGLISH GHOST RE-APPEARS

WINDSOR, Eng., Oct. 13.—The Black Lady, Windsor's name for the ghost of Queen Elizabeth, has reappeared at Windsor Castle.

The appearance is connected by old residents with the appointment of a new architect at the Castle, as the legend is that the Queen's ghost is always seen about the ancient battlements whenever there is a change in the personnel of the royal residence.

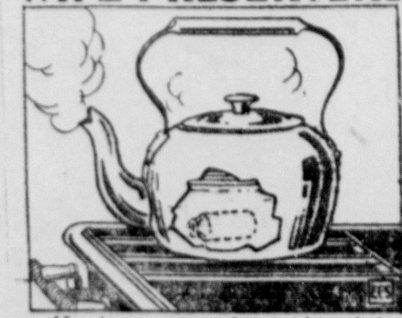

The spirit of Queen Elizabeth, according to Windsor people, is concerned with the welfare of the servants of the Crown responsible for the structural maintenance and repair of the Castle.

The Black Lady is England's most illustrious modern ghost, and has been seen by at least one member of the Royal Family, Princess Alice Countess of Athlone, when she was occupying a suite at the Castle.

The latest appearance of the ghost was from a window of the Saxon Tower, which has been unoccupied for more than a year.

MANHOOD

"Sometimes sit and wonder as I see
Men sell their beauty for some petty gain,
Debauch with folly pleasure to attain,
Debase their natures conquerors to be,
If ever from our worst we shall be free?
Or are we destined ever to remain
Unthinking victims of some earlier strain
Which had no vision of nobility?
Man could be gentle, kind and brave and true,
He could be fair, whatever his race or creed,
Yet pressed by selfish interests he will do
Such things which honest men will blush to read.
I tremble, lest some careless hour of mine
Shall stamp me brutal where I could be fine."

Wills Is Beaten By Sharkey; Thirteen Spells Defeat

BACKHAND BLOW IS WATERLOO; SHARKEY WINS BOUT EASILY

Bar-Room Ethics Cost Blade Gladiator Battle Laurel

By DAVIS J. WALSH
NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Men have been known, to stand in awe before the bust of Caesar but to me that's a large laugh, for I saw the bust that was Harry Wills last night, and I think that makes me a connoisseur. It would have been a prize to any collector of rare and well-done works.

Harry was exceedingly well done and his face was bloody rare in the thirteenth round when he committed the last of a lengthy series of flagrant fouls and Referee Patsy Haley awarded the bout to Jack Sharkey, of Boston, after twelve rounds and forty-three seconds of fighting, or what ever it was. It was a terrible fight and Harry Wills proved to be a terrible fighter.

He was the same Wills who harassed one heavyweight champion out of his title and forced his successor to seek that haven of refuge known as the color line; the same Wills whose name prompted governors and men high in the councils of political intrigue to shudder convulsively and reach for the pulse warmer.

He was the same Wills he always has been, a terror if they allowed him to use the polite ethics of the bar-room. But they didn't let him do it last night and Wills didn't win a round of the twelve and a fraction that were fought. And so the swarthy son of the man who caused more trouble within the temple of fistiana than any other individual in history was sung and it was one prolonged sour note. The writer enjoyed a weak moment at the end of the third round and, feeling a bit charitable, called the round even.

The rest were all Sharkey. He courageously carried the fight to the man who outweighed him by twenty-six and one-half pounds, left hooked his jaw, almost closed his eyes and pounded his body until it quivered and shook and quailed under the impact. Sharkey, apparently, knew what many another has professed to know these five years, yet hesitated to prove. It seemed that Sharkey knew Harry Wills couldn't fight a lonely lick.

It may have been, of course, that the knew himself to be a very good fighter. Perhaps it was a little bit of both. Anyhow, they called him to the radio before the fight and this is what he said: "Hello, everybody. This is Sharkey speaking."

He had started to move away from the microphone when the announcer suggested that he tell the fans something. So he returned and added:

"I'm going to beat Wills tonight as sure as h—"

Like the Virginian, he said it with a smile, but that only served to emphasize the seriousness of his conviction. That boy knew his victuals. More important still, he apparently knew himself.

He knew that he could hit well, box like a master and laugh off those slow punches the aged Wills was forced to use, because, for once, he was working with a referee who wouldn't let him hold and hit. That is the only kind of fighting Wills has known in years, and last night, with encroaching age showing in his ineffectual baldness, his flat, shuffling feet and the wrinkles of a mock orange in his face, Harry was less able to carry it through than ever before.

Amazingly strong in the arms but muscle-bound, Wills was pitiful at long range and every time he began pulling Sharkey toward him for that right-hand killer of his, Haley stepped in and broke up the play. However, he was warned times without number, but Harry Wills has been warned by referees before, so his only reply was to backhand, hit low, use the rabbit and kidney punch, hit on the break and hold and hit.

He did everything that was outside the book and finally, in the thirteenth round, when he continued to hit on the break, Haley did what he might have done at any time from the second round on: he waved Wills into his corner and out of the limelight forever. Dempsey simply had the wrong man in the opposite corner at Philadelphia.

To those at the ringside it seemed that Wills was determined to lose on a foul in order to rob Sharkey of the great credit that would have been his due by gaining a decision that was inevitable. His fouls appeared to be deliberate for any other conclusion.

Meanwhile, Sharkey had made a great fight in tearing after Wills from the first bell and scoring often with long left hooks and overhead rights to the head. The punches were a bit high; otherwise, Wills might never have reached the thirteenth round. As it was, the battering of his head, interspersed by a terrible drubbing of the colored man's body, had Harry weaving toward the wrong corner at the end of the second, fifth and ninth rounds and many times on the verge of a knockout.

That was all there was to the occasion; a white man weighing 188 pounds everlastingly beating up a giant negro weighing 214.2 pounds but slower than the flight of the hour hand; a black man whose only ability lay in what the colleagues might call unnecessary roughness.

Wills no longer is the man he once was; that is certain. But I am not one of those idealists who must harp upon the ravages of age every time some bozo loses "the duke." Harry probably was no worse last night than he has been during recent years. He simply was teamed up with a very good fighter and a competent referee who called all his shots.

The black nightmare of white heavyweights is decently buried!

TETANUS RESULTS FROM SMALL WOUND

Tetanus which developed in a tiny wound in the foot caused when the child stepped upon the upturned spout of an oil can twelve days ago may cause the death of George Henry Schmalstig, 9-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Schmalstig of the Lower Bellbrook Pike.

Anti-tetanus serum was administered by a physician to whom the parents took the child two days after he received the injury when the foot began to pain. So insignificant was the wound that the parents gave it no concern and thought the boy had sprained his ankle. Early Tuesday morning his condition became suddenly serious with symptoms of tetanus developing. His case is still critical but a slight improvement was noted Wednesday.

COACH KOLB GUARDING CENTRAL SQUAD FOR CONTINUED VICTORY

In addition to preparing his squad for one of the so-called "crucial" games this season of which there are probably many, namely the Washington C. H. battle, Friday, October 15 at Washington C. H., Coach Victor Kolb is faced with the task of banishing a spirit of overconfidence that has seized Central High School gridlers.

This over-confidence has been brought about by decisive victories over the O. S. and S. O. Home, Greenfield and Greenville, in the three opening games.

The return of Abe Rakoff to the line this week has boosted Central's stock several points and Coach Kolb is positive the lineup this Friday will be at least twenty per cent stronger than in any preceding game, if that is possible.

Central will take the field a favorite over Washington for the first time in several years. Coach Kolb will have the best material and the fastest squad that ever went up against the Court House lads in a number of seasons.

The rivalry between the two high schools stretches back farther than any other athletic feud within memory of local officials and is therefore considered more important than any other game.

Central rose in its might to defeat Washington unexpectedly in the final football game of the season in 1925 and Coach Kolb is hopeful but not over-confident of again winning. On the other hand the home team will be equally determined to wipe away this smear of last year's defeat.

Washington, however, must meet another model gridiron machine in this year's Central eleven. The Central meritor is keeping his charges busily engaged this week to perfect a fine offense. Washington, to have even a remote chance for victory Friday, must be able to have an airtight defense against the liberal number of forward passes sure to be tried by the Xenia eleven.

GREATEST GRID GAMES OF THE PAST

CORNELL'S FIRST VICTORY OVER HARVARD

For ten years Cornell had unsuccessfully endeavored to defeat Harvard until the Barrett engine machine of 1915 overthrew the Mahan-King-Harte combination in a hard-fought game at the Harvard stadium.

A touchdown by Barrett in the first quarter following a fumble by Mahan on his 25-yard line, the subsequent goal by Barrett and a clever goal from the field by Shiverick in the final period built up the Cornell points.

Incidentally this was the first defeat of a Harvard team since early in 1911 when a nondescript Crimson eleven fell before Glenn Warner's Carlisle Indians.

Mahan was injured early in the game in tackling Barrett and had to be taken out.

"Not Possible To Classify"

By Mack Sauer

HAVE YOU BARGAINITIS?

I am bargain-crazy. Rubber collars have been out of the picture for years, but shove a dozen of them under my nose at half-price and you'll make a sale, I race after cut-prices, like women after ten cent store dish pans.

Last week after receiving my pay check I thought I would go straight home and present the filthy lure to my wife, but odor of powerful bath soap floated out from a ten cent store and tempted me. I decided to go in and get just one five cent bar of lilac soap.

Thirty minutes later I came out with a dozen coat hangers, three pounds of salted peanuts, a pair of garters for my wife, a dozen phonograph records, a pair of spectacles, a climbing monkey on a string, a package of needles, a bicycle pump, a claw hammer, a package of clothes pins and a couple of bundles of miscellaneous articles too numerous to mention.

While waiting for the car, I chanced to see a small hole-in-the-wall advertising any straw hat in the window for twenty-five cents.

"Cheap, like dirt," yelled the proprietor, coaxingly.

I strolled over and looked them over. Why, he had hats that sold formerly for as high as $5. I felt I could not afford to pass up such bargains, and left the store with three "Imported Straws," thinking what an idiot he was to sell them at such low prices.

"Twenty-five dollar set German books $2.50" was the sign that next attracted me. Surely here was the bargain of the life-time. Altho I cannot read a word of German I bought them.

The only reason I did not buy a used car and a house and lot was because I did not have the down payment. Several advertisements sounded so good that I answered them, grieving because I could not make the purchases.

I promised my wife I would lead a better life and swear off buying bargains. But tonight I saw a bass drum advertised for $16.7, I bought it. She saw me coming home with the drum and beat it. I don't know if she will return or not. If she doesn't, I got a bargain at last.

OUT OF THE ETHER

As they cut off his leg,
Jim said with a jeer
To the surgeon at hand,
"What's comin' off here?"

A man by the name of Canary has been arrested, the opinion being that he is a jail-bird. By the way, canaries, pets, poultry, and livestock are often advertised for sale on this page. Just phone your ads to Phone 111 tomorrow.

FROM TENTH STORY

As he fell from the roof,
Said Hiram D. Gory
To a workman near by
"That's another story."

Sayre, the druggist says he dreamed about me the other night. He then spoils it all by saying he has been dreaming of the craziest things lately. Anyway, I'd like to have one of those fine sodas he serves down there. I know of no bargain quite so good in Xenia, unless it is an ad on this page. Phone an ad to 111 tomorrow.

A woman can wear a coat of tan during the summer and it doesn't cost her much, but when it comes to buying a tan coat for winter that's different.

"SCAR-FACE AL" PLEADS FOR PEACE IN GANG WARFARE

along all right and 'Nails' began bragging fellows into the crowd, Dean O'Banion, 'Schemer' Drucel, Louie Alterie, 'Hymie' Weiss and others.

"Finally these fellows began to make a little money and forgot we were the ones who gave them their chance and put them in business. They began thinking they were bigger than we were. Then they told us they were going in business for themselves. Well, that was all right with us. We figured there were customers for all the beer in the world and they were welcome to those they could dig up, so we let them go.

"There wasn't any bad feeling between us but pretty soon they began to act nasty. 'Nails' and O'Banion had been killed and the other guys were killing chesky. Finally, we had to talk to them about it. On a Monday, we had a meeting and told them to stay in their yard and behave themselves or we'd have to scold them. They told us they'd quit what they were doing. On Saturday afternoon, they shot Torrio in his car beside his wife.

"Johnny knew who shot him, all right. He saw them. But he wouldn't put the finger on them (identify them). He was willing to forgive and forget. We talked to them again. I talked to 'Hymie' Weiss and the others, saying: 'What do you want to do, die before you're thirty? I don't. I've got a kid and I don't want to leave him. Johnny is willing to call it even right now if you fellows will.'

"They said all right and we started over. We kept our bargain but they broke theirs. They took my driver—a boy that didn't know any more about our affairs than you do—for a ride, tortured him and threw him into a cistern.

"The next week, 'Schemer' Drucel, with 'Hymie' Weiss, was shot at in Michigan avenue. A couple of weeks after that, eleven cars drove past this hotel at noon and gave us a machine-gun fire that made this street look like a battlefield. "Last week, right after that, we arranged a meeting in the Sherman hotel. I sent Tony Lombardo, my friend and the head of the Unione Siciliana, to talk for me. I told Tony we that wanted peace. Weiss said that we could have it—if we'd put those two fellows that had figured in the Michigan avenue shooting 'on the spot.'

"Tony didn't ask him who he meant—but he told him—and he was talking for me when he said it—that we wouldn't do that to a yellow dog. And the meeting broke up."

"What do you think of the killing Monday?" Capone was asked. "I think it was butchery," he said in a quiet, low voice. "Hymie" was a good kid. He could have got out long ago and taken his and been alive today."

being considerably more complicated than that of the crown prince, there is no telling how many years it would take to clear the way for his return after he had once expressed the wish through regular channels. More over—although Princess Hermine did not say so—the correspondent has reason to believe that the ex-kaiser's pride would prevent him from asking a Republican government's permission to return. After all, that permission would be an indispensable condition.

Asked about the ex-kaiser's health, Princess Hermine said, "I am glad to say he is very well and has overcome the grippe, from which he suffered in August."

"I will be glad to return to Doorn to be with the kaizer on the birthday of the late Empress Augusta Victoria, which we always observe as one of the consecrated days of the year."

The princess here added words warm in tribute to the late empress, first wife of the ex-kaiser.

"I have spent my children's autumn holidays here with them and looked after my affairs on my estate," she continued. "You know, it was agreed between the kaizer and myself when we married that I should spend three months in Germany each year, as I have not only duties towards him but also towards my children, which he has always appreciated and acknowledged with a spirit of fairness and generosity which is characteristic of him."

At this juncture the youngest child of the princess by her first marriage, Little "Princess Sunshine," came into the room to bid her mother good morning. The little princess, who is the image of her mother but so much more so, as she understands no English, and, after kissing her mother affectionately, started to run out to play, but stopped halfway and returned, pulling a little box of candy from her apron pocket and offering its contents to her mother and the correspondent with all the charm and grace of a lady of the world. She then skipped out into the vastness of the beautiful park that surrounds the castle.

The last question the interviewer asked was a delicate one, since it revolves around the political crisis that has arisen in Germany over the temporary enlistment of the former crown prince's son with the reichswehr. Princess Hermine did not hedge or evade but said frankly: "The kaizer deeply deplores that incident and its consequences."

BERLIN, Oct. 13.—The exclusive statement made to the International News Service today by Princess Hermine, that the ex-kaiser has taken no steps to secure his return to Germany, is confirmed by an Amsterdam dispatch to the semi-official Wolff agency. This dispatch states that neither the ex-kaiser nor the Dutch government has undertaken any steps for the return of the ex-kaiser to Germany. It states that, in Dutch official circles, it is believed that the former emperor is not disposed to return to Germany.

The Girl Who Dared

By May Christie

THE DEMON JEALOUSY
Mary was thankful of the respite. But, alone, her thoughts were in a turmoil. She was roused by the jangling of the telephone. Shivering with chill and nervous apprehension, she got out of bed and went to answer it.

The voice was Philip's. Cold, remote, she thought it sounded. Or was that just her fancy, after the recent warnings?

He was sorry she was indisposed. He had hoped to dance with her tonight. Something rather special was on hand. A competition of some sort. He had wanted her as partner. Oh, yes, he'd had his dinner. He felt fine. Such bad luck that she wasn't fit enough. He'd telephone her in the morning.

Mary hung up the receiver numbly. Her lips trembled. Not a word had Philip uttered! She hadn't given him time, of course. She'd been as curt as he. Mrs. Wade's sharp rebuke to her in front of Philip—that must have lowered her in his eyes—must have made him definitely realize her position in the party as a paid employee, nothing more.

"Cheap!" How the word rankled! How it hurt!

Mrs. Wade bustled in at ten o'clock.

"Feel better? Good! The doctor sent this medicine. Here, take it. He was going out in a hurry or he'd have run up to have a look at you himself."

Would there be any word from Philip? Mary wondered—hoping.

"Are—many people dancing?" She couldn't help the question.

Mrs. Wade gave a breezy laugh. "Your young man's on the floor, all right. He's with the Stuyvesant child. Oh, right in with the Gilded Set. It's disgusting how that flapper carries on. I'd spank her, if I were my daughter. But money excuses everything."

She went away, and Mary lay there in the darkness, cold and hot in her premonitions, and with a shivery feeling of which the chill was not the only cause.

Music of the band came fitfully up to her. Gay it sounded. Mocking.

She dozed in an uneasy dream. Then waking, looked at the luminous dial of the watch upon her wrist.

Eleven-thirty. Clapping of eager hands below, encoring the dance music.

Philip—with young and rich and pretty Sadie! Oh, she could not bear it!

Sleep came at last—fitful, unhappy, unrefreshing. And in the morning her head ached so terribly she had to stay in bed.

No word from Philip. The telephone was silent.

How hot the bedroom was! She turned and tossed. At half-past ten, after a cup of coffee and two aspirins, she got up to look the window, letting some air into the overheated room.

Then, glancing downward to the avenue, her heart gave a great and agonizing jump, and seemed to turn right over in her bosom. For, pretty as a picture on her neat, brown mare, sat Sadie Stuyvesant and on a borrowed mount beside her looking oh! so handsome and happy sat Philip Andover smiling into Sadie's young alighting face.

A knife twisted in the heart of Mary Forrest. Philip—and this pretty wealthy girl! Riding together into sunshine—laughing—contented, herself totally forgotten.

Mrs. Wade's words came back with agonizing clarity. "Cheap!" She had been that. Now she must pay the price. She stumbled back to her bed one hand pressed to her throbbing forehead.

A tap came at the bedroom door. "It's only me my dear. Feeling better? I hope so because Cyrus and I want to leave tomorrow. We've booked accommodation at the Poinciana in Palm Beach. You'll be fit to travel won't you?" She gave the girl a quick keen look.

"Oh yes." It would be good to get away from here.

"You took that chill in time" Mrs. Wade prided herself on her knowledge of "treatments"

She went away and Mary had a bath and dressed. Her head felt better though her heart was still like lead.

Philip! That other girl! Could Philip have come back yet. Was it he? Nervous tremors caught her.

But it wasn't Philip. It was her employer. There were business letters that he must dictate to her. They had "slacked" shockingly of late and would she please come down immediately?

She worked with him all one o'clock. The luncheon-gong had boomed but he looked uncertainly at her.

"The New York mail goes out at three. These letters may need re-writing. Could you do with something in here—a sandwich and coffee?" The little man was worried.

"Oh yes." Mary was glad that this provided an excuse to absent herself from the luncheon-table. The thought of meeting Philip some how was intolerable.

A waiter brought a tray to her. Cyrus Wade came back a little after two to scan the letters ordering an alteration here and there. Two or three letters were re-dictated.

Then giving her a strange look through his horn-rimmed glasses, he remarked: "Young Andover was asking after you at lunch. We had a quite a merry party. That young Miss Stuyvesant joined our table."

Another stab in Mary's heart. Merry, were they? So the Sadie girl had taken her place. She hadn't lost much time.

And Philip—?

She told herself she hated him. Why deep in her hurt heart, she knew this was untrue. He might treat her badly—but never could she feel anything but pain—but vain regrets.

She finished her work by three, and crept out for a walk alone. Warm sunshine shone upon her. She went up to the pine woods, hoping... They were empty.

It was long past tea-time—for she could not face the gay crowds that congregated from half-past four to five in the hotel lobby—when Mary returned, her feet lagging. She slipped in by a side entrance, and up to the privacy of her own room.

A long cardboard box lay on the bed. It looked as though it might contain flowers. She cut the string with trembling fingers, and drew out a dozen exquisite red roses. A tiny envelope contained a card.

"To Mary—loverlier than these."

The signature was Philip's. Her heart bounded, singing a mad tune of joy. Fears were forgotten. He had sent her this offering—red roses—symbol of love.

She telephoned for vases. She hummed a little tune as she arranged the fragrant blossoms in water. Their perfume touched her senses, filled her with a heavenly ache of longing.

Would he go to Palm Beach with them? It was on his journey. Oh! he must!

She went over to the window, leaning out a little. A bright red touring car was coming up the avenue. A girl whose black bobbed tresses glinted in the sun was at the wheel—a man beside her.

Sadie and Philip...? Yes.... it was, again.

OHIO PREFERENCE PRIMARY MAY PASS INTO STATE HISTORY

COLUMBUS, Oct. 13.—Ohio may dispense with the extra presidential preference primary held every four years, combine it with the regular state and county primary and thus save the voters hundreds of thousands of dollars.

A special committee created by the last legislature is prepared today to recommend to the forthcoming general assembly several changes in the state's election laws.

Under the prevailing system the presidential primary every four years is held in April and four months later, in August, comes the regular state and county primary.

Do away with one of them, hold them both at the same time, and save the state $750,000 quadratically, the committee will urge the legislature.

The committee also will suggest that the regular state and county primary be held in May instead of in August, as is now the custom. This, the members contend, would give the candidates for elective offices three months additional time in which to wage their campaigns.

The presidential primary every fourth year also would be held in May, at the same time.

Ohio State University boasts of today of a touch of nobility in its student ranks.

Bashwarrad Habtewold, a ward of Ras Tafari, reigning prince of Abyssinia, has been enrolled in the College of Commerce and Journalism. He is the first of his race to ever enter Ohio State University.

Upon his graduation Habtewold plans to return to his native land to enter the royal service.

Cancer could be entirely eliminated within two generations through a study of heredity and selective mating, according to Dr. Maud L. Slye of Chicago.

In an address before the Columbus Academy of Medicine, Dr. Slye said susceptibility to cancer is hereditary and unless both parents have cancerous tendencies their children will not be subject to the disease.

Should one parent be afflicted however, the children will be capable of transmitting it to their offspring in the event they marry persons with cancerous tendencies, Dr. Slye explained.

An agreement may be entered into by six states for the protection of public water supplies, according to Dr. John E. Monger, state health director.

Such an agreement exists today between four states—Ohio, Pennsylvania, Kentucky and West Virginia.

RUBBER PRICES NOW STABILIZED

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 13.—Rubber prices, which alarmed American motorists several months ago

by revealing the tightening tentacles of a great British monopoly, are now stabilized, Harry E. Blythe, vice president of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., declared today upon his return to Los Angeles from a several months' survey of European markets.

"I believe the present price of 40 cents a pound for crude rubber will continue with little variation," Blythe declared.

Blythe and William Stephens, production manager of the Goodyear plant at Akron, Ohio, studied the rubber market and production methods in France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany, England and Scotland. The largest plant in Europe, Dunlop's at Birmingham, England, is exceeded in size by five plants in the United States, Blythe asserted.

The rubber company officials were also interested in the total absence of traffic regulations in France and in the rapid growth of bus and aeroplane travel in every country of Europe.

Concrete pavement gives greater value per dollar than any other type

28 Washington Cities Paved With Concrete in 1925

Here are three or four facts that should interest property owners, business men and city officials everywhere.

During 1925, 28 Washington cities paved with concrete.

The total yardage of this modern pavement was 1,681,454 square yards.

That was 89 per cent of all the street paving contracts awarded in the whole state of Washington during the year.

There must be some good reasons back of such a marked preference for concrete streets. And there are.

Washington cities are growing. Traffic problems are multiplying. Streets must be built to stand up under modern traffic, and they must do it economically.

Concrete paving exactly meets all requirements. It is permanent. Upkeep and repair costs are negligible. It is a safe surface for motor traffic, in any weather. What's more, it is clean, attractive-looking pavement.

All of the facts are in our free booklet on "Concrete Streets." Ask for your copy

LIVE STOCK VALUED AT $85,198.60 IS MARKETING LOCALLY

Live stock producers of Greene County marketed co-operatively, live stock valued at $85,198.60 at market, reports County Service Manager A. A. Conklin. Forty-nine car floors of stock were consigned by twenty-four shippers. Shipments from this county helped to make up the $1,319,430.86 worth of live stock that was co-operatively marketed during September by thirty-seven county live stock associations, according to a report drawn up by the Live Stock Marketing Department of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation.

The number of head reported through the co-ops for the month shows considerable increase in hogs and cattle marketed and a slight decrease in sheep and calves over the corresponding month of 1925. Cost of marketing in the thirty-seven counties decreased from 63.6 cents a hundred in September of last year to 60.7 cents. The marketing expense in this county was 45.2 cents.

Approximately 15,000 head of lambs have been distributed in Ohio through the co-operative lamb pool of the co-operative associations working with the National Live Stock Producers Association, says F. G. Ketter of the Federation's Live Stock Department. These lambs, coming to Ohio in ninety-six car floors, represented Ohio live stock men's share of the 120,- 000 lambs handled from western territory to corn belt feed lots through the National Co-operative purchasing pool. The lambs were placed in sixteen different counties, and reports from those receiving them indicated complete satisfaction on the western purchases. The co-operatives are now in the midst of deliveries of feeder stock through the cattle and calf pool which is being handled in the same way as the lamb pool. Cattle are being brought in from Texas, Nebraska and Colorado, direct to the feed lots of the state.
